FRANCE MAY HONOR HERRICK

GOVERNMENT PLANS STATE FUNERAL IF CONSENT IS GIVEN

Would Hold Lavish
Rites; Ohio Pays Its Tribute

PARIS, April 2.—France has asked permission to pay her noblest tribute to Myron T. Herrick, who endeared himself to the French people during the years he was United States ambassador at Paris.

A state funeral, almost as lavish as that given Marshal Ferdinand Foch a week ago today, was offered by the French government, but consent had not been received early today from President Herbert Hoover or Parnely Herrick, the ambassador's son.

The government said it would bear all expenses of the funeral, which would be conducted along lines suggested by Herrick's family, but with all the splendor and dignity the French government could give. The funeral will be held Thursday.

In addition, France has offered her fastest warship to carry the body of the ambassador to Washington. The ship, Tourville, attained a speed of thirty-four knots an hour during recent speed trials.

Another honor comparable to one of the many paid to Marshal Foch will be accorded Herrick by the municipality of Paris. It was decided today to rename one of Paris' principal streets after Herrick, the first envoy to France ever so honored. Paris paid a similar tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

President Hoover's cablegram, acknowledging the French government's condolences at the death of the American ambassador, was received today by President Gaston Doumergue.

Three registers at the United States embassy were almost filled with names of callers today. They included all members of the cabinet, and many high government and political figures.

Among the telegrams received was one from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, expressing his sorrow at news of the ambassador's death and offering his services however possible.

Elliott Root arrived in Paris yesterday. Root had expected to lunch with Herrick yesterday and remain a week as his guest. He said he was deeply grieved to hear of Herrick's death.

"He was an old and affectionate friend and a noble gentleman," Root said.

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—The general assembly today paid tribute to the memory of the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick.

The house unanimously adopted a resolution introduced by Rep. Lawrence H. Norton, Cleveland, former secretary to the ambassador, and the senate adopted a similar resolution by Senator Joseph Ackerman, Cleveland, honoring the former Ohio governor.

The Norton resolution praised Herrick's career in public life.

The senate resolution expressed "appreciation of his splendid character and those qualities which made him a useful and honored servant of this state and nation."

COUNCIL ASKS GROH TO RESIGN

To Demand Removal By Governor

DOVER, April 2.—Removal of Mayor P. J. Groh on a charge of accepting a bribe, was to be asked of Gov. Myers V. Cooper today by the Dover city council.

Members of the council last night at their regular meeting passed a resolution asking the mayor's resignation. Groh declined to resign.

Mayor Groh yesterday wired State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy asking that a special examiner be sent here to go over the mayor's books. The request was made following new charges that Groh had withheld $5,500 in liquor fines.

"If there is anything wrong with my books I want to know it and I want the public to know it," he said.

Henry Bowers, counsel for Groh, made public a letter today in which he had asked Gov. Cooper to postpone action until the grand jury can act on the bribery charge. It is alleged that the mayor accepted a $50 bribe from a state dry agent.

MAN HANGS SELF

WELLSVILLE, April 2.—Financial difficulties were assigned today as the motive for the suicide of Charles Headley, 58, former employee of the local gas company, who hanged himself in his home here.

BANDIT GETS $4,000 IN DAYLIGHT HOLD UP

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—A bandit walked into the office of the Western and Southern Life Insurance Company here today, held up three women employees and escaped with $3,922.75.

The insurance office is on the third floor of the Kresge building and a few persons were on the floor at the time. Before entering the office the robber loitered in an ante-room.

The women were Mrs. C. R. Lawler, Miss Georgia Miller and Miss Ruth Jackson. They were preparing the money for the bank when the bandit entered, displayed a revolver and ordered them to raise their hands.

CORONER LAUNCHES INQUEST IN DE KING DRY RAID SHOOTING

Transfer Scene Of Hearing
To Avoid Trouble In Aurora

GENEVA, Ill., April 2.—The first public inquiry into the "dry raid killing" of Mrs. Lillian De King by Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith in her home in Aurora a week ago Monday night, opens today before Coroner Herman J. Vierke.

Because of the intense feeling which the case has aroused in politically wet Aurora, scene of the shooting, the inquest was transferred hastily to Geneva.

Conflicting testimony of two prohibition investigators promised to furnish the highlight of the inquest, which will determine whether Deputy Smith must face criminal charges for killing Mrs. De King and clubbing her husband while their twelve-year-old son looked on.

"We don't look for any trouble," Vierke said, "but to make certain we moved to Geneva where the county court house affords more room."

It had been planned to hold the inquest in the Aurora city hall as majority of the witnesses live in Aurora but Vierke said feeling had been running high there and he thought there would be less danger in Geneva, the county seat.

Although there have been no open threats of violence in Aurora, friends of the De King family have been bitter in their criticism of Smith and his companions in the raid a week ago that cost Mrs. De King her life and resulted in the clubbing of her husband.

Joseph De King, the husband, will be one of the chief witnesses at the inquest. With him will be Gerald De King, twelve-year-old son, who shot Smith in the leg after his mother had slumped to the floor, fatally wounded in the stomach by a charge from Smith's sawed-off shotgun.

De King still is suffering from effects of the blow of Smith's shotgun. Doctors feared that numbness in his arms presaged paralysis and that his skull was fractured.

The first move of the coroner's jury today will be to go to Elgin and take a statement from Smith, who is recovering from the wound inflicted by Gerald.

State's Attorney George D. Carberry will not attend the inquest, he said, after a circuit court judge had granted a petition requested by Carberry that the state attorney general take charge of any prosecutions that may arise from the investigation.

THRILL SLAYERS GET LIFE TERMS

ATLANTA, Ga., April 2.—George Harsh, 19 year old college boy who faced the electric chair for the "thrill hold up" slaying of Willard Smith, a drug clerk, was saved yesterday by a consent verdict which changed his sentence to life imprisonment after he had been granted a new trial.

Richard Gray Gallogly, alleged accomplice of Harsh, pleaded guilty to the same murder and was sentenced to life.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY UNDER FULL STEAM; WRIGHTS HONORED

Passes Resolution Of Testimonial To Plane
Inventors

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—The general assembly began operating under full steam today in accord with tentative plans to bring the session to an end this week.

Speaker O. C. Gray and Floor Leader Arthur Hamilton of the house and Floor Leader Allan G. Aigler of the senate today took the floor to discuss the Wright brothers in the next five days.

They believe that by Saturday both chambers can recess and that following the recess a few members of the senate and a few representatives can return to complete the perfunctory formality of final adjournment.

The house remained in session until ten o'clock last night disposing of bills accumulated on its calendar. Starting tomorrow it is probable that both chambers will be in session every night until the wind-up.

Ten bills and two resolutions were approved by the house and one bill defeated. One resolution provided for presentation of a testimonial from the state of Ohio to Orville Wright, of Dayton, acknowledging the achievements of Wright and his brother, Wilbur, deceased, as inventors of the airplane and their accomplishment of the first flight in a heavier-than-air craft.

The testimonial is to be presented to Orville Wright at a joint session of the senate and house tomorrow afternoon.

The house, by a vote of 122 to 0, passed the only bill introduced this session by Speaker O. C. Gray of Cadiz. It provides for the purchase by the state of the birthplace of Sarah Huff, whose son, Donald, a light-weight, died after a fight here Nov. 28. The coroner absolved Martin and others of any connection with the boy's death.

JONES ACT SPONSOR EXPLAINS MEANING OF ITS PROVISIONS

Measure Aimed At Big
Bootleggers Senator Says

WASHINGTON, April 2.—In view of widespread dispute over provisions of the Jones act and the announced intention of wets to seek clarification in the new congress, the author of the act, Senator Wesley Jones of Washington, today gave the United Press a detailed explanation of what it is intended to do.

It's maximum penalties up to five years imprisonment would mean no hardship, Jones said.

The act can not be applied to those arrested for possession or any of the minor infractions of the prohibition act, he explained, but can only be enforced against those arrested for manufacture, sale, transportation, exportation or importation of intoxicating beverages, particularly specifically mentioned in the constitutional amendment.

The importation provision could therefore be applied to Rep. Michaelson, Republican, Ill., had the alleged smuggling of liquor for which he is under indictment been effected after the law's enactment. It could also be applied against Rep. Morgan, Rep., Ohio, whom customs agents have unofficially charged with a similar offense.

If convicted, Morgan, as any other citizen, could receive the maximum penalty for a first offense. It is believed although Jones did not discuss either the Morgan or the Michaelson case.

"At first I had a specific statement in my bill to have it apply to bootleggers," Jones said. "Senator Reed of Pennsylvania objected to the use of this word, which some senators believe has no legal status."

"I therefore changed the bill so as to define bootleggers stating it is the intent of congress that the court in imposing sentence should discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of intoxicating liquor, or attempts to commercialize violations of the law."

Jones pointed out his bill is not technically an individual law, that it makes no new crimes under the Volstead act and that its sole purpose is to increase the maximum penalties so big bootleggers can be made to feel the law.

"The chances are the maximum penalties will not be invoked except in cases like the $5,000,000 bootlegging syndicate uncovered recently in Chicago," he added. Those big syndicates are the ones we want to reach."

Jones said he would resist the announced intention of Senator Tydings, Dem., Md., who told the United Press he intended to introduce an amendment to the special session convening a week from Monday seeking to modify or clarify the act so it could not be abused.

LINDBERGH OFF ON MYSTERY TRIP

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 2.—Officials at Kelly Field announced Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off early today for an unannounced destination. He flew from El Paso, re-routed his plane and took off in a southeasterly direction.

Conflicting reports concerning his visit here today were:

1. That he was en route east to join the tribute to the memory of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick when the diplomat's body is brought back from France.

2. That he was en route to Mexico City to visit his fiancée, Miss Anne Morrow.

The colonel himself declined to say which report, if either, was true.

BANDITS ROB BANK OF $10,000 CASH

CINCINNATI, O., April 2.—Police today still were without any tangible clues to the identity of two bandits who held up a Washington Bank and Trust Company branch and escaped with $10,000.

The robbers drove up to the bank as it prepared to close for the day and after compelling three employees to lie on the floor, scooped up all the cash in sight and fled. As they drove away their automobile left a trail of dense smoke which obscured the license number of the car.

PROMOTER IS SUED

SANDUSKY, April 2.—Edward J. Martin, local boxing promoter, has been sued for $40,000 by Mrs. Sarah Huff, whose son, Donald, a light-weight, died after a fight here Nov. 28. The coroner absolved Martin and others of any connection with the boy's death.

AURORA, Ill., April 2.—The sorrow of a million years peers from the eyes of Gerald De King here. They are eyes prematurely saddened and grown old as though they had lived and seen into the ages.

And, yet, Gerald is just a little boy. In fact he has just turned twelve.

A month ago he was playing with his toys. He was thinking of the baseball team on which he is the catcher.

He was asking his mother: "Mother will we have cake for supper?"

But now he no longer thinks such things. Now he no longer talks to his mother, because his mother is dead.

She died before Gerald's sad young eyes. She died as she stood calling for help over the telephone while a dry raiding party of sheriffs and deputies pounded in the door of their home.

The deputies had guns in their hands. They had machine guns, revolvers and shotguns. They also had gas bombs.

But first they fired at Gerald's mother and she just gasped. She swayed against the wall. She lingered for a minute to the telephone receiver and then went down all covered with blood.

Fired Blindly. He also saw the officers bash in his father's head with the butt end of a shotgun. Then Gerald picked up a revolver and shot back at the officers. He hit one of them in the leg, although he had his eyes closed when his finger pressed the trigger.

Everything since that day has been a dream to Gerald. He can not recollect cause with effect. He has only a boy's philosophy. He reasons instead in losses. Once he had his mother. Now she is dead.

That is the only way Gerald can think because his mind still is young though his eyes are old, so old.

You could scarce believe how old they look. Something seems to move in back of them. You can see in them, if you look close, the agonies of many peoples. You can see in them mirrored there an intricate Gethsemane.

Gerald peters with his boy's mind to find the cause like an old man tapping feebly with his cane to find the way about a room or down a street.

But he can reason only in the terms of loss because that is how all boys reason. They reason that way even though their eyes are ages old—ages old like Gerald's eyes.

"Mamma is gone," says Gerald. "I shot the man who shot her. His

GOVERNOR BACKING SULLIVAN BILL FOR GAS TAX INCREASE

Four Cent Gasoline Tax
Is Favored By
Cooper

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—The Sullivan bill, to increase the state gasoline tax to four cents a gallon became an "administration" measure today backed by Governor Myers V. Cooper. It will come before the house for passage tomorrow.

The Governor threw his support to the tax increase measure after a series of conferences with representatives of organizations which have been advocating the four-cent tax and spokesmen for the Ohio State Automobile Association and affiliated clubs, which are opposed to the increase.

The increase would mean an additional annual revenue of $8,500,000 for the state.

Last year Ohio automobile owners paid approximately $25,000,000 in gasoline taxes, under the three-cent tax, and $11,840,000 in license taxes, a total of nearly $37,000,000.

Advocates of the increased tax have insisted they have at least one hundred votes for the Sullivan bill in the house. A majority in the senate has opposed the increase, but the governor's endorsement is expected to change enough votes to insure passage.

Senator Allan G. Aigler, president pro tem of the senate, said that with the administration support the increase, there will be "more than enough votes" to put it through the senate.

The first gasoline tax law was enacted in 1925, when a two-cent a gallon levy was imposed, the 1927 legislature increased the tax to three cents.

In announcing his decision to support the increase, Governor Cooper said:

"The automobile association representatives said they were willing to approve outright a 3 1/2 cent tax, but that if the legislature and the governor determine it necessary to levy a four-cent tax in order to maintain the highway program to make the necessary appropriations for the secondary road system, they would not oppose the added one-cent tax."

The revenue, the governor proposed, shall be distributed as follows: 60 per cent to the state; 20 per cent to the counties for secondary highways; 10 per cent to the cities, divided on the basis of automobile registration; and 10 per cent divided equally among the counties.

NATIVE RUNNERS OF AUSTRALIAN WILDS EXPLORING JUNGLE

Plane Dispatched In Search Fails To Find
Lost Men

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 2.—The primitive mode of man's travel and communication was pressed into service today in an effort to rescue the four crew members of the plane "Southern Cross" exponents of man's latest achievement in the annihilation of space.

Native runners, little dark bushmen of the wilds of northwestern Australia, were dispatched from the Forrest River Mission, near Wyndham, into the untracked and death-infested jungles of the unexplored Drysdale River region where it is believed Captain Charles E. Kingsford-Smith and his companions were forced down last Sunday.

A native Bushman was also sent today to guide aviators over one of the wildest and most inaccessible parts of the country. Although the Wyndham radio station has called the Southern Cross repeatedly since Capt. T. P. Uim messaged late Saturday night the fliers were preparing to land, no answer has been received.

Apparently the plane landed in the practically unexplored Drysdale River region. It was making an attempt at a non-stop flight from Sydney to Wyndham, enroute to England by way of Singapore.

It was hoped a Bushman could be found who would ride in a searching plane over the region where the fliers said they were preparing to land.

One searching plane flew over the section yesterday from the Port Hedland government station but returned to report it had found no traces of the four men. The plane went as far as Fitzroy Crossing, 2,100 miles northwest of Sydney.

Other searching efforts were hampered by a terrific cyclone in the country about Wyndham, but the northwest mounted police had an expedition in readiness to leave that city as soon as possible.

It was recalled that Father Alcade of the Drysdale River mission was speared a few years ago by natives in the same section where the Southern Cross may be down, and the army airmen here said neither Kingsford-Smith nor Uim was armed when they took off for Wyndham Saturday morning.

If the fliers survived the landing in such unsuitable country, they had with them only twenty-four sandwiches and thermos bottles of tea and brandy. Wild game abound in that country, but without guns game would be most difficult to capture.

The greatest dangers, authorities said, were in the cannibals and poisonous reptiles which inhabit the region. Even the most advanced natives were said to be far from civilized.

It was hoped the Southern Cross landed within easy walking distance of the Drysdale River mission, where they could find aid.

POLICE BAFFLED BY COX BOY MYSTERY

KENT, O., April 2.—The enigma surrounding the disappearance of 9 year old Edmund Cox remained as baffling today as it has since the boy dropped from sight.

Young Edmund vanished last Wednesday, from one of the town's principal business streets, and policemen are convinced he was kidnapped.

County commissioners, hoping to spur the search, have posted a $500 reward for information as to his whereabouts and this was expected to be raised today by public subscription.

Detectives continued searching for an answer, an avowed enemy of the Cox family, who may have had some connection with the lad's disappearance.

MINISTERS DEMAND BOXING BE BANNED

STUEBENVILLE, O., April 2.—Following the death here of Tony Azerra, 24, Pittsburgh lightweight, after a bout with Earl "Young" Sweeney, Mingo, O., resolutions condemning boxing and asking that the sport be banned in the city and county, were placed in the hands of officials here last night.

The resolutions were passed by members of the Steubenville Ministerial Association. Coroner Arch L. Bell is completing an investigation into Azerra's death.

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—The general assembly today paid tribute to the memory of the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick.

The house unanimously adopted a resolution introduced by Rep. Lawrence H. Norton, Cleveland, former secretary to the ambassador, and the senate adopted a similar resolution by Senator Joseph Ackerman, Cleveland, honoring the former Ohio governor.

The Norton resolution praised Herrick's career in public life. The senate resolution expressed "appreciation of his splendid character and those qualities which made him a useful and honored servant of this state and nation."

DOVER, April 2.—Removal of Mayor P. J. Groh on a charge of accepting a bribe, was to be asked of Gov. Myers Y. Cooper today by the Dover city council.

Members of the council last night at their regular meeting passed a resolution asking the mayor's resignation. Groh declined to resign.

Mayor Groh yesterday wired State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy asking that a special examiner be sent here to go over the mayor's books. The request was made following new charges that Groh had withheld $6,500 in liquor fines.

"If there is anything wrong with my books I want to know it and I want the public to know it," he said.

Henry Bowers, counsel for Groh, made public a letter today in which he had asked Gov. Cooper to postpone action until the grand jury can act on the bribery charge. It is alleged that the mayor accepted a $50 bribe from a state dry agent.

De King still is suffering from effects of the blow of Smith's shotgun. Doctors feared that numbness in his arms presaged paralysis and that his skull was fractured.

The first move of the coroner's jury today will be to go to Elgin and take a statement from the wound inflicted by Gerald.

State's Attorney George D. Carbery will not attend the inquest, he said, after a circuit court judge had granted a petition requested by Carbery that the state attorney general take charge of any prosecution that may arise from the investigation.

JONES ACT SPONSOR EXPLAINS MEANING OF ITS PROVISIONS

Measure Aimed At Big
Bootleggers Sena-
tor Says

WASHINGTON, April 2.—In view of widespread dispute over provisions of the Jones act and the announced intention of wets to seek clarification in the new congress, the author of the act, Senator Wesley Jones of Washington, today gave the United Press a detailed explanation of what it is intended to do.

It's maximum penalties up to five years imprisonment would mean no hardship, Jones said.

The act can not be applied to those arrested for possession or any of the minor infractions of the prohibition act, he explained, but can only be enforced against those arrested for manufacture, sale, transportation, exportation or importation of intoxicating beverages, particularly specifically mentioned in the constitutional amendment.

The importation provision could therefore be applied to Rep. If convicted, Morgan, as any other citizen, could receive the maximum penalty for a first offense it is believed although Jones did not discuss either the Morgan or the Michaelson case.

"I therefore changed the bill so as to define bootleggers stating 'it is the intent of congress that the court in imposing sentence should discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of intoxicating liquor, or attempts to commercialize violations of the law.'"

Jones pointed out his bill is not technically an individual law, that it makes no new crimes under the Volstead act and that its sole purpose is to increase the maximum penalties so big bootleggers can be made to feel the law.

"The chances are the maximum penalties will not be invoked except in cases like the $5,000,000 bootlegging syndicate uncovered recently in Chicago," he added.

"Those big syndicates are the ones we want to reach."

Jones said he would resist the announced intention of Senator Tydings, Dem., Md., who told the United Press he intended to introduce an amendment at the special session convening a week from Monday seeking to modify or clarify the act so it could not be abused.

AURORA, Ill., April 2.—The sorrow of a million years peers from the eyes of Gerald DeKing here. They are eyes prematurely saddened and grown old as though they had lived and seen into the ages.

And, yet, Gerald is just a little boy. In fact he has just turned twelve.

A month ago he was playing with his toys. He was thinking of the baseball team on which he is the catcher.

He was asking his mother: "Mother will we have cake for supper?"

But now he no longer thinks such things. Now he no longer talks to his mother, because his mother is dead.

She died before Gerald's sad young eyes. She died as she stood calling for help over the telephone while a dry raiding party of sheriffs and deputies pounded in the door of their home.

The deputies had guns in their hands. They had machine guns, revolvers and shotguns. They also had gas bombs.

But first they fired at Gerald's mother and she just gasped. She swayed against the wall. She hung for a minute to the telephone receiver and then went down all covered with blood.

Fired Blindly
Gerald saw this. He also saw the officers bash in his father's head with the butt end of a shotgun. Then Gerald picked up a revolver and shot back at the officers. He hit one of them in the leg, although he had his eyes closed when his finger pressed the trigger.

Everything since that day has been a dream to Gerald. He can not reconcile cause with effect. He has only a boy's philosophy. He reasons instead in losses. Once he had his mother. Now she is dead.

"That is the only way Gerald can think because his mind still is young though his eyes are old, so old."

You could scarce believe how old they look. Something seems to move in back of them. You can see in them, if you look close, the agonies of many peoples. You can see in them mirrored there an articulate Gethsemane.

Gerald patters with his boy's mind to find the cause like an old man tapping feebly with his cane to find the way about a room or down a street.

But he can reason only in the terms of loss because that is how

NATIVE RUNNERS OF AUSTRALIAN WILDS EXPLORING JUNGLE

Plane Dispatched In Search Fails To Find
Lost Men

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 2.—The primitive mode of man's travel and communication was pressed into service today in an effort to rescue the four crew members of the plane "Southern Cross" exponents of man's latest achievement in the annihilation of space.

Native runners, little dark bushmen of the wilds of northwestern Australia, were dispatched from the Forrest River Mission, near Wyndham, into the untracked and death-infested jungles of the unexplored Drysdale River region where it is believed Captain Charles E. Kingsford-Smith and his companions were forced down last Sunday.

A native Bushman was also sought today to guide aviators over one of the wildest and most inaccessible parts of the country.

Although the Wyndham radio station has called the Southern Cross repeatedly since Capt. T. P. Uim messaged late Saturday night the fliers were preparing to land, no answer has been received.

Apparently the plane landed in the practically unexplored Drysdale River region. It was making an attempt at a non-stop flight from Sydney to Wyndham, enroute to England by way of Singapore.

It was hoped a Bushman could be found who would ride in a searching plane over the region where the fliers said they were preparing to land.

One searching plane flew over the section yesterday from the Port Hedland government station but returned to report it had found no traces of the four men. The plane went as far as Fitzroy Crossing, 2,100 miles northwest of Sydney.

Other searching efforts were hampered by a terrific cyclone in the country about Wyndham, but the northwest mounted police had an expedition in readiness to leave that city as soon as possible.

It was recalled that Father Alcaide of the Drysdale River mission was speared a few years ago by natives in the same section where the Southern Cross may be down, and the army aviators here said neither Kingsford-Smith nor Uim was armed when they took off for Wyndham Saturday morning.

If the fliers survived the landing in such unseizable country, they had with them only twenty-four sandwiches and thermos bottles of tea and brandy. Wild game abound in that country, but without guns game would be most difficult to capture.

The greatest dangers, authorities said, were in the cannibals and poisonous reptiles which inhabit the region. Even the most advanced natives were said to be far from civilized.

It was hoped the Southern Cross landed within easy walking distance of the Drysdale River mission, where they could find aid.

POLICE BAFFLED BY
COX BOY MYSTERY

KENT, O., April 2.—The enigma surrounding the disappearance of a 9 year old Edmond Cox remained as baffling today as it has since the boy dropped from sight.

Young Edmond vanished last Wednesday, from one of the town's principal business streets, and police are convinced he was kidnapped.

County commissioners, hoping to spur the search, have posted a $500 reward for information as to whereabouts and this was expected to be raised today by public subscription.

Detectives continued searching for an ex-convict, an avowed enemy of the Cox family, who may have had some connection with the lad's disappearance.

MINISTERS DEMAND
BOXING BE BANNED

STUEBENVILLE, O., April 2.—Following the death here of Tony Azzeri, 24, Pittsburgh lightweight, after a bout with Earl "Young" Sweetwater, Minn. O., resolutions condemning boxing and asking that the sport be banned in the city and county, were placed in the hands of officials here last night.

The resolutions were passed by members of the Steubenville Ministerial Association. Coroner Arch L. Bell is completing an investigation into Azzeri's death.

RAISE FUND FOR BOY
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 2.—Tommy Milton and Cliff Durant, automobile race drivers, raised $550 at a dinner here for the schooling of Gerald DeKing, 12, Aurora Ill., whose mother, Mrs. Lillian DeKing, was killed by a dry agent.

GOVERNOR BACKING SULLIVAN BILL FOR GAS TAX INCREASE

Four Cent Gasoline Tax
Is Favored By
Cooper

COLUMBUS, O., April 2.—The Sullivan bill, to increase the state gasoline tax to four cents a gallon because an "administration" measure today backed by Governor Myers Y. Cooper. It will come before the house for passage tomorrow.

The Governor threw his support to the tax increase measure after a series of conferences with representatives of organizations which have been advocating the four-cent tax and spokesmen for the Ohio State Automobile Association and affiliated clubs, which are opposed to the increase.

The increase would mean an additional annual revenue of $5,500,000 for the state.

Last year Ohio automobile owners paid approximately $25,000,000 in gasoline taxes, under the three-cent tax, and $11,840,000 in license taxes, a total of nearly $37,000,000.

Advocates of the increased tax have insisted they have at least one hundred votes for the Sullivan bill in the house. A majority in the senate has opposed the increase, but the governor's endorsement is expected to change enough votes to insure passage.

Senator Allan G. Aigler, president pro tem of the senate, said that with the administration supporting the increase, there will be "more than enough votes" to put it through the senate.

The first gasoline tax law was enacted in 1925, when a two-cent a gallon levy was imposed, the 1927 legislature increased the tax to three cents.

In announcing his decision to support the increase, Governor Cooper said:

"The automobile association representatives said they were willing to approve outright a 3 1/2 cent tax, but that if the legislature and the governor determine it necessary to levy a four-cent tax in order to maintain the highway program to make the necessary appropriations for the secondary road system, they would not oppose the added one-cent tax."

The revenue, the governor proposed, shall be distributed as follows: 60 per cent to the state; 20 per cent to the counties for secondary highways; 10 per cent to the cities, divided on the basis of automobile registration; and 10 per cent divided equally among the counties.

TESTIMONY AGAINST MORGAN IS HEARD; SET MICHAELSON TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 2.—United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle pondered testimony today to determine whether he would take the case of Rep. William M. Morgan of Ohio, accused of violating prohibition laws, before a federal grand jury.

The testimony, none of which was revealed, was given by seven members of the New York customs office. Among those who appeared at Tuttle's office yesterday was assistant collector H. C. Stuart.

In a report filed several days ago two customs inspectors charged that Morgan had four bottles of whiskey in his luggage when he arrived here aboard the liner Cristobal from Panama. They said the congressman admitted he had the whiskey, but insisted he was entitled to free entry because of his official position.

Morgan, a Republican who has been a consistent supporter of prohibition legislation, has denied that he had the whiskey or that he ever took a drink.

The customs men who testified at Tuttle's hearing were reported to have been in accord on the accounts of the incident they gave to the United States attorney.

It was rumored that if Tuttle's office decided to take no action, the matter of Morgan's alleged assertion that he was entitled to free entry of the port might be taken up in congress.

Rep. F. H. LaGuardia, who was aboard the same ship, has said that none of the members of congress who were on the Cristobal were on official business.

LINDBERGH OFF ON MYSTERY TRIP

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 2.—Officials at Kelly Field announced Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off early today for an unannounced destination. He flew here from El Paso, re-ruled his plane and took off in a southeasterly direction.

Conflicting reports concerning his visit here today were:

1. That he was en route east to join the tribute to the memory of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick when the diplomat's body is brought back from France.

2. That he was on route to Mexico City to visit his fiancée, Miss Anne Morrow.

The colonel himself declined to say which report, if either, was true.

BANDITS ROB BANK OF $10,000 CASH

CINCINNATI, O., April 2.—Police today still were without any tangible clues to the identity of two bandits who held up a Washington Bank and Trust Company branch and escaped with $10,000.

The robbers drove up to the bank as it prepared to close for the day and after compelling three employees to lie on the floor, scooped up all the cash in sight and fled.

As they drove away their automobile left a trail of dense smoke which obscured the license number of the car.

PROMOTER IS SUED
SANDUSKY, April 2.—Edward J. Martin, local boxing promoter, has been sued for $40,000 by Mrs. Sarah Huff, whose son, Donald, a light-weight, died after a fight here Nov. 28. The coroner absolved Martin and others of any connection with the boy's death.

PHYSICIAN DIES

CLEVELAND, April 2.—Dr. Charles M. Swingle, 61, author, educator, philanthropist and nationally known physician, is dead at his home here after a long illness.

Dr. Swingle, before actively practicing medicine, was principal of the public schools in Bowling Green and Millersburg. He was educated in Muskingum College.

MISS ALBERTA ACKERMAN

suffered greatly from constipation. She was subject to dull headaches and always complained about being tired. Her complexion was sallow and rough. She was never hungry. She was listless and wanted only to sit around and never had a desire to mingle with the other children.

"Konjola had done so much in my own case that I decided to give it to her. Konjola went right to work and changed her appearance almost immediately. It corrected her bowel trouble, stimulated her liver and restored her appetite. That languid tired feeling has given way to one of glorious energy and vigor. Her complexion has cleared up. I know that Konjola is a splendid remedy for children, not only as a medicine but as a general tonic."

Konjola is different from any other known remedy in this section. It contains 22 juices extracted from natural plants, which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that has been going on for years. At the same time, many weak and run-down systems have been restored to a new state of health thru this compound. MURDERED TO SHINE AS HERO IN GIRL'S EYES

By ROY J. GIBBONS CHICAGO, April 2.—Stanley Reichel, 25-year-old motorman, faces the electric chair here because, police say, he cold-bloodedly planned and carried out the murder of an innocent dupe in an effort to shine as a hero in the eyes of a girl and her wealthy parent.

His daughter, Frances, so John Maslanka, the father, had indicated, might look higher than a motorman for a mate. Thus was the germ of the plot planted in the brain of the infatuated Reichel, who himself is married but estranged from his wife.

Police authorities say he worked the entire scheme out in advance with Machiavellian cunning. As they re-enact it, the boy waxed desperate over his failure in the game of hearts. He conceived the thought to blackmail the father for $500, threatening his daughter's life as the penalty for non-payment.

The father merely reported the attempted extortion to the authorities, but the girl was distraught. As Reichel had planned, she told him of the blackmail letter, because he previously had concocted a falsehood for her consumption to the effect that he had quit his job on the street cars and entered the secret service.

Plot Lacked Action

More letters followed the first. What the plot lacked was action—and something to give it substance. Reichel, investigators declare, supplied this essential by brutally beating to death Michael Hrybski, an automobile installment collector in a garage at the rear of the Reichel home. Then with the blood of his victim still on his hands, he hurried to the home of Miss Maslanka to bask in the warmth of her approval and the heroism of her approval of the killing in single-handed combat the extortioner who had threatened her life.

It is so the police paint the picture. Reichel admits the killing, but claims he was attacked by Hrybski and struck him down in self-defense.

His story is fantastic and police say, shot through with falsehoods. In a seven-page statement, which he did not sign, Reichel declares that his victim really was the blackmailer of Maslanka and that he tracked him down personally. Hrybski, he intimates, perhaps learned that he was under suspicion and lay in wait for him (Reichel) in the garage.

"I had proof on March 18 that Hrybski had written those letters to Mr. Maslanka and I asked Mr. Maslanka if he wanted the man caught," declared Reichel. "He told me he didn't. Then I told Frances about it and she said she would never be satisfied until the man who wrote those letters was killed. Her mother and her sister Stephanie, told her she was crazy to talk that way."

"Tuesday night as I was putting my car into my garage, I noticed the door was partly open. I started in and saw a strange car standing there. Then something hit me on the head. I was dizzy but not knocked out, and got hold of a lamp and fender bracket, and swung. A man fell down. I went

PROOF OF DYES is in the dyeing!

Words won't dye a dress, or coat, or sweater. It takes real anilines to do that. That's why Diamond Dyes contain from three to five times more anilines than any other dye—by actual test.

It's the anilines in Diamond Dyes that do the work; that give the colors such brilliance; such depth and permanence. It's real aniline that keeps them from giving things that dyed look; from spotting or streaking.

Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes. Then compare results. See how soft, bright, new-looking the colors are. Observe how they keep their brilliance. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. Bride - Elect Is Being Feted At Parties

MISS Mary Little, whose marriage to Mr. Eddy William Eckey, Cincinnati, will take place Saturday, April 13, at Christ Episcopal Church, has been honored at many lovely pre-nuptial affairs since her interesting announcement was made public recently.

Miss Little, a popular member of Xenia's younger social group, has been the recipient of many delightful parties during these early spring days, and events arranged in her honor will keep her busy in an interesting round of events before the date of the nuptials.

Invitations have been issued by Miss Margaret Little, N. King St., for Wednesday evening, Miss Mary Carolyn Smith, N. Galloway St., will be the hostess at another affair Thursday evening and Miss Helen Sayre, N. King St., is entertaining Friday evening for the bride elect.

AUXILIARY ENJOYS BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The Clara Allen Auxiliary of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. Church entertained members of the First Auxiliary and Home Guards at a covered dish dinner at the church parlors, Monday night. This was the annual birthday party of the society given as a preparatory feature to the jubilee celebration next year when the national society marks its fiftieth milestone.

After devotions, led by Mrs. C. R. Stearns, the ninety guests seated themselves at the tables placed in the form of a maltese cross, the four sections of which were decorated to represent the four seasons of the year, each guest finding her place at the table according to her birth month.

The Auxiliary, just recently named for its founder, Miss Clara Allen, was further honored by the announcement that Miss Allen had been made a perpetual member of the society by her niece, Mrs. Lawrence Shields. A most beautiful and appreciative letter to the auxiliary from Miss Allen, in recognition of the action of the society in changing its name, was read by Mrs. S. O. Hale, chairman. Mrs. George Hudson, Dayton, reviewed briefly the early days of the mission hand organized by Miss Allen. Mrs. Shields also made a few remarks.

The birthday secretary, Miss Lorena Paulin, took charge of the remainder of the program, introducing Mrs. J. T. Charters who gave an explanatory talk on one of the projects of the jubilee, the work of the deaconess. She gave in an interesting manner the early history of this movement and stressed the importance of furthering this laudable work. Mrs. Minnie B. Thomas read a poem on "The Deaconess" after which Miss Paulin presented the speaker of the evening, Mrs. E. C. Turley, Dayton, a former officer of the district, who addressed the society in a most entertaining and instructive way on the different projects of missionary work that the jubilee celebration is featuring.

She dwelt on the splendid work being carried on at the Mothers' Jewel Homes over the country. Mrs. Turley's talk was an inspiration to increase interest in the splendid work being done by the national society of the W. H. M. S. of which each auxiliary is an important part.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Turley's talk a letter was read from Mrs. C. P. March of Lebanon, thanking the auxiliary for flowers sent her several weeks ago. Mrs. March is a former president of the society.

A huge birthday cake which concealed a box, received the birthday offerings of the society and concluded an evening of rare enjoyment and profit. The hostess committee, which was responsible for much of the success of the evening, was composed of the following: Miss Cora Williams, chairman, Miss Bertha Hook, Mrs. Robert Luce, Miss Clara Marshall, Mrs. Francis Orr, Mrs. W. O. Gattis, Mrs. V. A. Moll and Miss Marie Blum. The birthday secretary, Miss Paulin, was assisted by Miss Rosetta Frazee.

Plans for the dance to be sponsored by The Downtown Country Club Friday night, April 5 will be discussed at the bi-monthly dinner-meeting of the organization at the Frances Inn Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. A full attendance is desired.

PRESBYTERIAN CHOIR PRESENTS CANTATA

The Easter cantata "Our Lord Victorious" by Shelley, rendered by the vested choir of the Presbyterian Church Sunday evening presented an evening of Easter music of unusual merit.

The choruses and individual and group numbers offered a variety of exceptional combinations which allowed no moment to lapse unfilled by joyous Easter harmonies. Mrs. Pearl Armstrong showed skill in direction, being well supported by Mrs. William Anderson at the organ.

A short devotional period led by Rev. William H. Tilford, pastor, preceded the cantata. He used the thought of The Risen Lord convincing the disciples on the first Easter evening of His resurrection.

The cantata opened with a call in unison from the tenors and basses, to behold the wondrous Jesus under "Ye Men of Israel," Miss Zella Soward taking the soprano obbligato.

Miss James Wilson III followed with a contralto solo describing the "Three Crosses on a Hill," the music being well adapted to the contralto range.

"The Lord's Death" was a bass solo taken by Mr. Raymond Shumaker, which outlined the facts of the Lord's suffering.

The mournful strains of a funeral dirge marked the singing by the chorus of "The Lord's Burial." The measured tread of the cortege was followed as the words pictured the way to the tomb.

The composer inserted a beautiful organ "Elegy 2" to mark the division of time between the burial and the resurrection morning.

The chorus opened the second part of the cantata with a "Prophecy of the Resurrection," followed on with a descriptive number of the "Tomb," the organ crashing out a number of strains depicting the early morning earthquake, at which time the stone was rolled away. The women coming to the tomb found it empty.

A new voice in solo work in Xenia presented the angel's message in a tenor solo "He is Not Here," by Mr. Ralph Baldwin, the choir instantly taking up the chorus "He is Risen."

"God Hath Highly Exalted Him," a bass solo by Mr. Raymond Shumaker, was fittingly set here gathering up the prophecies and applying them to the event just announced, that Christ was to be at the right hand of the Father.

A quartet, Miss Ruth Alexander, soprano; Mrs. Wm. H. Tilford, alto; Mr. D. D. Jones, tenor; Mr. W. R. Jeffries, bass, took up the Master's words at the time of the ascension in the great commission "Go Ye Therefore In All The World."

A high point before the finale was a devotional consecrating solo "Thou Art With Me" by Miss Zella Soward, which offered a beautiful expression of the fellowship Christians have with the Risen Lord.

The closing chorus was a grand paean of victory "Our Lord Victorious."

Mrs. William Anderson's numbers on the organ were "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," by Gounod; "The Resurrection Morn," by Johnson; and "March On! Easter Themes," by Andrews.

A large and appreciative audience was present.

The members of the choir are as follows:

Sopranos—Mrs. George Baldwin, Miss Eleanor Alexander, Miss Ruth Alexander, Mrs. Arthur V. Perrill, Miss Josephine Armstrong, Miss Zella Soward.

Altos—Mrs. James Wilson III, Mrs. Earl Short, Miss Viola Orr, Miss Mae Orr, Mrs. Wm. H. Tilford.

Tenors—Mr. Raymond Cox, Mr. Ralph Baldwin, Mr. D. D. Jones, Mr. E. C. Dudley, Mr. Wm. Anderson.

REDUCING

Fat poultry, fat pigs, but fat humans—no! "No one loves a fat man" and no man, according to what they say, can love a fat woman.

Fat, lazy bodies are apt to cause fat, lazy minds. And there is little room for that kind of a mind in our modern civilization. Therefore the craze for reducing.

Women are the most ardent reducers. They act on the theory that it is much more necessary for women to look well in man's sight than for men to look well in theirs—a theory that men encourage.

Turkish and other sweating baths, exercises of various kinds, starvation diets—nothing is too painful if this "too, too solid flesh" will but melt. Counting of food calories becomes the favorite indoor sport of the plump sisterhood. Even housework is glorified if it reduces.

Whether the edict of Florenz Ziegfeld and Paris fashion dictators in favor of curves will have any effect on the reducers remains to be seen. Curves are certainly more desirable than angles, but modified curves as expressed in the "girlish figure" are, in the general opinion, more desirable than gold, aye, than "much fine gold."

The Missionary Society of the United Brethren Church will meet Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the church. All members are urged to be present.

Purchase of The Peoples Oil Co. filling station on Bellbrook Ave. from A. J. Zimmerman, Dayton, O., by The Carroll-Binder Co., E. Main St., wholesale and retail dealer in gasoline, kerosene and motor oils, was announced Tuesday by Charles A. Carroll, president and treasurer of the latter company.

Possession of the station changed hands at noon Monday. The consideration was not disclosed.

The filling station had been operated by The Peoples Oil Co. at its present location for the last three years. As soon as possible the purchasing company expects to dispose of the equipment there and substitute its own products, including Indian gasoline, Indian Red and high test.

The tank capacity at the station will also be increased by the installation of two more tanks, each having 10,000 gallon capacity, for motor oils. Addition of the new tanks will provide a total tank capacity of 70,000 gallons at this station as tanks now installed there have a capacity of 25,000 for gas, 10,000 for motor oils and 15,000 for kerosene.

The total holdings of the company in terms of tank capacity now aggregate 136,000 gallons as the capacity of the firm's bulk plant on Hill St. is 66,000 gallons.

In view of the latest purchase, it is announced by Mr. Carroll that plans for construction of a storage plant on newly-acquired property at Bellbrook Ave. and Charles St., on the site of the old DeWine grain elevator, destroyed by fire, will not be carried out. This property will not be put to any immediate use.

REDUCING

By Laird

Fat poultry, fat pigs, but fat humans—no! "No one loves a fat man" and no man, according to what they say, can love a fat woman.

Fat, lazy bodies are apt to cause fat, lazy minds. And there is little room for that kind of a mind in our modern civilization. Therefore the craze for reducing.

Women are the most ardent reducers. They act on the theory that it is much more necessary for women to look well in man's sight than for men to look well in theirs—a theory that men encourage.

Turkish and other sweating baths, exercises of various kinds, starvation diets—nothing is too painful if this "too, too solid flesh" will but melt. Counting of food calories becomes the favorite indoor sport of the plump sisterhood. Even housework is glorified if it reduces.

Whether the edict of Florenz Ziegfeld and Paris fashion dictators in favor of curves will have any effect on the reducers remains to be seen. Curves are certainly more desirable than angles, but modified curves as expressed in the "girlish figure" are, in the general opinion, more desirable than gold, aye, than "much fine gold."

DEPEW DUTCHER IS REMOVED BY DEATH DUE TO PNEUMONIA

Depew Dutcher, 38, former Xenian, clerk in the Middletown, O., Post Office, died in the Middletown Hospital from double pneumonia at 8 a. m. Monday, following an illness lasting several weeks. He had been removed from his home on Logan Ave., in that city to the hospital two weeks ago.

Mr. Dutcher at one time clerked at the Criterion clothing store for two or three years and moved away from this city nearly ten years ago. However, he never transferred his Masonic connection to Middletown, although he had been a resident of that city for a number of years.

He also had a World War record, was a member of the American Legion, Officers' Reserve Corps and the Quartermasters Association.

His home was originally in Piqua, O. Later he was connected with the Statler Hotel at Cleveland and for a time while a resident of Xenia was associated with the old Grand Hotel here.

Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Mary Dutcher, owner of the Clarendon Hat Shop on Central Ave., in Middletown, and two brothers, Riley, of Piqua, O., and Emery, San Francisco, Calif.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

CARROLL - BINDER COMPANY BUYS OUT PEOPLES OIL PLANT

Purchase of The Peoples Oil Co. filling station on Bellbrook Ave. from A. J. Zimmerman, Dayton, O., by The Carroll-Binder Co., E. Main St., wholesale and retail dealer in gasoline, kerosene and motor oils, was announced Tuesday by Charles A. Carroll, president and treasurer of the latter company.

Possession of the station changed hands at noon Monday. The consideration was not disclosed.

The filling station had been operated by The Peoples Oil Co. at its present location for the last three years. As soon as possible the purchasing company expects to dispose of the equipment there and substitute its own products, including Indian gasoline, Indian Red and high test.

The tank capacity at the station will also be increased by the installation of two more tanks, each having 10,000 gallon capacity, for motor oils. Addition of the new tanks will provide a total tank capacity of 70,000 gallons at this station as tanks now installed there have a capacity of 25,000 for gas, 10,000 for motor oils and 15,000 for kerosene.

The total holdings of the company in terms of tank capacity now aggregate 136,000 gallons as the capacity of the firm's bulk plant on Hill St. is 66,000 gallons.

In view of the latest purchase, it is announced by Mr. Carroll that plans for construction of a storage plant on newly-acquired property at Bellbrook Ave. and Charles St., on the site of the old DeWine grain elevator, destroyed by fire, will not be carried out. This property will not be put to any immediate use.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A NEW HEART NECESSARY—Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die?—Ezekiel 18:31.

SURRENDERIN RIGHTS

A referendum is to be held shortly in Wisconsin to decide whether or not the state prohibition enforcement law shall be retained on the books. The New York state enforcement act was repealed some years ago. Some of the states have never had enforcement acts. This exhibition of state rights is an understandable manifestation; but it has its dangers. The eighteenth amendment gives congress and the several states concurrent power to enforce it. The presumption seems to be that where a state refuses to assume its share of the responsibility for enforcement, congress and the executive branch of the federal government will assume and discharge of entire responsibility therefor.

Something of this sort seems to have been hinted by Mr. Hoover, when he said in his inaugural address that among the reasons for the lax enforcement of prohibition was the "failure of some states to accept their share of responsibility for concurrent enforcement." Whether the federal government wishes to assume full responsibility for enforcement in those states that refuse to accept their share of the burden is of no practical importance. Unquestionably it will be importuned to do so. The question therefore arises, whether it is wiser for a state to do its own enforcement in its own way and thus preserve a semblance of state rights; or to invite the consequences implied in Mr. Hoover's warning. A state that lies down on the job and thus invites federal invasion of its police powers is hardly in a position to object if that invasion is carried out with the efficiency and ruthlessness characteristic of authority remote from local prejudices.

The potential consequences of leaving enforcement entirely to the federal government transcend theoretical rights. They can come home to a state with unpleasant directness. State enforcement officers are amenable to state law and courts. They can't go too far in their enthusiasm without hearing from those who hire and fire them. A federal enforcement officer knows no law but that laid down for him at Washington. When he shoots an innocent citizen or commits any other indictable crime, a federal court steps in and assumes jurisdiction in the case. The state in which the crime is committed has nothing to say about it. This is something for states to ponder, which think they will be better off if they leave enforcement entirely to Uncle Sam.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK.—When Porter Carruthers was the business brains of the N. Y. Evening Post he decided to arouse his advertising bureau with a pep talk. So he urged Christopher Morley, then the rag's columnist, to make the speech before the men. Morley was strenuously opposed to this Rotarian stunt, but finally consented.

The entire advertising staff collected in Mr. Carruthers' office. They waited an hour for Morley, who groaned as he entered. Then, in a greatly animated manner, he briefly chirped: "As I look over this gathering, I strike me that if each of you fellows would bring in at least one ad we'd have a lot of advertising."

Mr. Morley was never called upon for a pep talk again.

DRAMA

Ed. Gallagher, one part of the famous Gallagher and Shean team still is pretty low at the sanitarium where he has been confined for over three years. A letter in care of the doctor in charge came the other day containing two old dirty ten spots. The note read: "We just heard about your illness. You wouldn't know us because we are obscure people. But we used to enjoy you so much and trust you will permit us to make you happy for a few moments. Please take this money and have them buy flowers to make your sickroom more cheerful on Easter, or something."

There was no signature. It was apparent that the thoughtful senders sacrificed themselves. It was the first letter any one sent him since his long and miserable confinement.

BAFFLED ISN'T THE WORD!

Under the heading "A Press Agent Is Baffled," Mr. Arthur Kober writes in the Sunday Telegraph, "The Broadway stars who do not want publicity (to filch the expression of a Broadway columnist) can be counted on the fingers of Venus."

Thanks for the ad. as a morning paper columnist (whose name is Franklin P. Adams) would say.

ALWAYS BELITTLED

Among other bookish diversion seekers are recommended to "All Victories Are Alike" by Leane Zugsmith. (Payson-Clarke, Ltd.). We quote from its jacket: "He was Page Trent, the columnist, who loved himself too much to love the world. You can see him any day walking down the avenue, his felt hat pulled over his third eyes. He thought he might be forgiven by the wounded women in his life through marrying one. His story is the story of the universal cheat who finds himself the cheated."

In fewer sentences, it is a delightful romantic book about a columnist who loved and lust.

OOP!

Take it from Harry Reichenbach, if there weren't any bad actors there wouldn't be any need for press agents.

WILL GOES A-TOURING

Due to the fact that Will Rogers has been signed to make a talking picture in Los Angeles this summer, Charles Dillingham is sending "Three Cheers," his big musical extravaganza, co-starring Will Rogers and Dorothy Stone, to as many big key cities as possible before June 1, so that patrons in other cities can see this big show before that date, when Mr. Rogers will depart for the coast. As a result, "Three Cheers," will close at the Globe on April 13 and will be followed by a brief engagement in Boston. Incidentally, this will be Will Rogers' last appearance on stage or in concert for the next two years.

IT COULD HAPPEN

They would have you believe that Mr. Ziegfeld in hiring a very beautiful girl recently, warned her that he never tolerates flirting, while in the theater, at any rate.

"Keep your dignity and self-respect when working for me," counseled the femme glorifier, "and whatever you do, never be seen talking to a press agent."

"Please don't worry," replied the girl. "I can't bear press agents. I was brought up to hate the very sight of them. You see, my father was a dramatic editor."

IF I WERE KING

If I were king, ushers who gum up seat locations in theaters and try to unravel the mix-up while the curtain is up, would have to wear starched petticoats in joy. . . . Tenors who act coy would be forced to eat hearts of lettuce without French dressing. . . .

Fellows who baby-talk to the sweeten hearts would be made to get a bill of acts for a benefit show. . . . Girls who tell you that they like you because you are so different (but go out with guys who aren't) would have to sit through a night club revue cold sober, and people who use Broadway delatessen owners to name a sandwich after them would have to eat them if I Were King!

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

THE KING BUSINESS

Prince Abdel Kadir was the favorite son of the late sultan of Turkey. If the kingdom had survived, the prince might now be looting on the throne. Instead, he has been looking for a job in the orchestra in a restaurant in Budapest, Hungary. Well, well, the king business in Europe isn't so good as it once was. Most of the kings on the checker board of the world have been taken out of play. Those who are left listen to the people. They are voters at the polls.

WHAT IS IT WORTH?

There is no such thing as putting a money value on anything and being sure that it is accurate. You may want a thing so much that your price is absurdly high, judged by somebody else's desire, or perhaps you would pay ten dollars for what somebody else would gladly pay a thousand.

Did you know that the cost of discovering the new world by Christopher Columbus was only $6,000? Columbus got a salary of $270 a year. Sailors got two dollars a month. The ships were fitted up for $2,300. Food cost a dollar a head a month.

Figure America's wealth in billions. Put it alongside the $6,000 that Columbus spent. Who shall say what anything is worth. You never can tell.

LET'S BE CAREFUL

Says a wise lawyer, George Wickham: "We used to think that war was the sport of kings. It's in great danger of becoming the toy of democracies."

Talkers and writers have long been claiming war upon diplomats and rulers who sit around a table and move men like checkers. But let's watch out. The passions of a democracy may run as wild as those of a monarch. Rulers and diplomats may move more slowly than the people themselves. The flame of a certain kind of misguided patriotism may run across a nation like a prairie fire.

PROHIBITION INVESTIGATION

All well wishers of the republic will hope that President Hoover's prohibition commission will do more than look into the manner of law enforcement. The people are ready for an examination of the whole matter of prohibition. There are no phases of the subject which a committee on inquiry can properly leave out.

FLOOD CONDITIONS ON MISSISSIPPI CLOSELY WATCHED

By M. J. GEN. EDGAR JADWIN

Chief of Army Engineers (Edgar Jadwin was born at Honesdale, Pa., Aug. 7, 1865. He studied at Lafayette college and was later graduated from the United States Military Academy and the School of Application in engineering. He was promoted through the ranks to the office of chief of engineers, with the title of major general, in 1926. He was stationed at the Panama canal during four years of its construction and served in France during the World War where he supervised engineering work on 60,000 men. He has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.)

Present conditions on the Mississippi and its tributaries are not considered serious and the danger of a flood comparable to that of 1927 has passed unless unforeseen heavy rains occur.

Army engineers, however, are watching the Mississippi proper very closely, particularly at the lower end of the river as the crest of the flood approaches the Arkansas river. Thus far no damage has been suffered by the levees under construction by the government at points along the Mississippi, the building of which were made necessary after the 1927 flood.

As to the Mississippi flood, protection plans the Cairo flood project is one of the most necessary of the entire program. By the construction of these levees the Mississippi would be enabled to overflow into an emergency channel several miles wide. Its present channel is but two miles in width. Under the plans the present levee at Cairo would be lowered and the area between it and the new high bank levees would provide the floodway.

Army engineers are cooperating in every way possible to safeguard the levees along the river and its tributaries. General instructions have been issued from engineers headquarters in Washington to army engineers in the field to repair the damaged levees, regardless of whether or not they are government-constructed. Two-thirds of the cost of repair work of this nature is borne by the government, under the flood legislation passed by congress. In addition to the commissioned engineering officers, enlisted men of the army corps are stationed at strategic points along the river to assist in the protective work.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What characterizes our modality of today. We have discarded the narrow bodies, tight stays and clumsy garments which once distorted unexercised bodies. As we have discarded the unhealthy, heavy wigs which were formerly a fashion. Heavy grease paint as a cosmetic is today for theatrical use only, and the chalky, coarse-grained, white-lead powders used in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries have given way to fine, fluffy powders of pure composition which are most pure and protect milady's skin.

Each beauty secret, each cream and lotion which a fashionable feminine of other days was wont to use, has been tested and tried by modern science, in the cold light of a laboratory. What is harmful has been discarded. What is good kept and improved upon.

The knowledge of medicine, chemistry and physiology, in its present high modern development combines with the records of history to build wise, helpful beauty products for the woman of today.

Beauty is awake! It lives and breathes with brave vitality, in a healthy, normal atmosphere of sunlight and freedom. Gone is the silly stuffiness of a puritanical era. Gone are the studied languors of artificiality and affectation.

The woman of today is superbly beauty-conscious. Like the pagan of old, she puts a proper valuation upon physical perfection. And unlike the early Grecian, she is able to follow her own inspired dictates and assert her superiority.

Improved on Mr. Hoover's. Naturally, Mr. Hoover will get his "breaks" in the news. Correspondents are human. They do their damndest to be nice to folk who are nice to them.

Aside from his easy accessibility through an ideal private secretary, the president is a first-class news source on his own account.

I believe his press visitors will agree that Mr. Hoover, as president, gives an impression of far greater liberality in his political views than some of them had expected.

He appears opposed to an oppressive tariff—almost a disciple of the tariff-for-revenue creed. Many forecasters predicted that he would betray jealousy of congress. Instead, he speaks more respectfully of its prerogatives than any of his recent predecessors.

Not a trace of the dictatorial strictest constitutionalist must admit him entitled to.

His law enforcement attitude is criticized by those who blame the laws themselves, if they break down. Yet even these critics wonder if his aim may not be to force a climax, to hasten real reform.

But the presidential schedule? Well, up at 7, breakfast at 8, at his desk at 9, luncheon at 1, back at work at 2:30, finished at 6 to 6:15. Then maybe a short walk or an auto ride. Dinner at 7:30. A couple of hours of such privacy as is permitted to presidents. To bed, as aforesaid, at 11—with a book, inevitably. To sleep, Morpheus alone knows when.

Of course, on cabinet days, which are Tuesdays and Fridays, at least two of the executive's forenoon hours are spent in conference with his department heads.

Twice a week, too, he receives the public between noon and 1, and shakes hands with all comers, but one of these reception days is to be canceled soon, it is understood.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—President Hoover spends eight hours in bed out of each 24. At least, just now. Congress may keep him up later, when it meets. So may parties, when the social season is on.

Even now, however, he gets fewer than eight hours sleep. He invariably takes a book to bed with him. Not talways a detective story, either. The president is a biography fan, too.

Eleven is his bedtime, and he rises at seven, but how long he lies awake reading I can't find out. I doubt whether anyone knows. Probably he dozes off gradually and couldn't tell the precise minute, himself. Certain chroniclers claim to have timed him all day, but I am aware of none who has sat up with him, to clock his first snore.

I admit I hate prying into such intimate details of a notability's life as—what time does he go to bed and get up?—eat his meals?—brush his teeth?—all that minutiae.

There have been presidents whom it irritated, too. What wonder? The veriest wage slave would rebel, called on by his boss for a split-second account of his every waking moment, on duty or off.

Nevertheless, the public demands it of presidents. Blessings!—say I, speaking as a newspaper man—on Mr. Hoover. He accepts these sassy questions, not only good-naturedly, but understandingly—and answers them.

I needed the new president's time-table in my business—guessing that it might differ a little from Mr. Coolidge's. No course seemed open but to query Private Secretary George Akerson.

"It will make him sore," I thought, "it's so idiotic."

Still, if it can't be helped—well, here we are on the White House steps.

"Come right in," invites Sergeant Larry Seaman, the guardian cop, recognizing us as of the correspondent corps.

Inside—Pat McKenna, custodian of the inner portals, admitting to Secretary Akerson's sanctum, and the president's own.

"Mr. Akerson? Sure," says Pat. "He's always glad to see the newspaper boys."

Without a knock in we go. "George," we explain, "this is a silly request, but harmless"—trying to break it to him by degrees. And, blushing, we state the object of our call.

"Not silly a bit," Secretary Akerson assures us, cordially. "The people have a perfect right to know all about their president"—and promptly lays the entire schedule before us.

"I've been a reporter myself, you know," concludes George.

That's the secret of it. Everyone in Mr. Hoover's organization is a specialist on his particular job.

If the Washington correspondents had been urged to submit blueprints showing exactly the kind of administration which would best suit their editorial requirements, they could not have

Diet and Health

BY LUDWIG HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables.

"Dear Doctor Lulu: I chuckled when I finished reading your foundation diet for reducers the other day. It sounds so simple, but where, except for the few women who live in their own homes, can one get one-half pound of spinach, or raw carrots? I have visions of asking for them at any of the so-called popular places for the business woman. Just how would you go about it? It is an impossible thing for at least two-thirds of the fat ladies in New York to live at home. Couldn't somebody make money on this? What about the vegetable plat? I hate it. Yours for emancipation."

MISS S.

Even the fat ladies of New York can have apples, oranges, bananas, pears or other fruits in their rooms, Miss S. A good-sized apple weighs almost one-half pound. Then certainly you can always get fruit and vegetable salads in the restaurants and tea rooms. And there is no reason why you cannot keep a small cabbage in your room and have some lemon juice with it. You can take this before going out to dine, if you are afraid you might overeat; this would take the edge off your appetite.

Restaurants, as a rule, cook their vegetables so there is not much taste to them—they use too much water and cook them too long, so I don't blame you for not liking the vegetable plate. Usually the meat orders in a restaurant are large enough for two, and frequently when I am dining with a friend, I suggest that one of us order a meat dish and the other several vegetables, and then we divide. In this way we do have a larger amount of the vegetables and enough meat or fish for each.

I hope you will get something from these suggestions, Miss S.

The foundation diet for the reducer's (and underweighters' and normal person's) diet is contained in our pamphlet on reducing and gaining weight. See column rules for obtaining this.

Mrs. C.—By a diuretic is meant an agent that increases the excretion of urine, so from this you can see that you cannot use the term to indicate an agent to decrease the flow.

Have you had a urinalysis and a complete check-up by a physician?

can? You should have this done. It may be possible that the urine is irritating from being too concentrated, causing irritation of the bladder, with frequent desire to void. If you really have an increase of urine which is considerably above the normal, it may be possible that you are beginning to, or already have, diabetes. This can be shown by the urinalysis. The normal amount averages one and one-half quarts; it may be more or less, depending upon the amount of water, type of foods taken and the season. During cold weather it is normal to pass more than during warm weather, because so much less is given off by perspiration.

I rather imagine you have an irritation of the bladder, rather than diabetes, but only a physician in personal charge of your case could determine this. If it is simply an irritation of the bladder, caused by an acid and concentrated urine, drinking liberal amounts of water and having a diet composed mostly of the non-acid foods, would help. Foods that have been especially helpful in rendering the urine alkaline are apples, bananas, beans, potatoes, oranges, muskmelon and milk.

It may be possible that your bladder is somewhat contracted and you may have to train it to hold more by not giving in to the impulse to void each time, until you know there is considerable to pass.

Have your check-up, Mrs. G.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Human nature frequently bumbles in love making. A cold wife is only another way of saying a disillusioned, disappointed wife. The husband of cold wives have only themselves to blame; they have never taken the trouble to master the art of making love."

"The authentic article (love) has but one vital desire—and that is the happiness of the beloved. It is utterly selfless. It is equally prepared to go to the uttermost ends of the earth with the beloved—or to stay out of that person's life forever."

This is what a famous beauty, who had scores of lovers, said of that most talked of passion—love. Not many of us can measure up to her standards, can we? We demand possession of the loved one.

LONESOME LARRY loves a girl. He is 22, she 17. At first her folks objected to the courtship, then the girl attended a party at his house and drank beer and smoked and Larry's mother was not favorably impressed. Then the girl grew cold and Larry decided "all was over between them." But they meet smiles at him and dances with him, and he's plain puzzled what to think. She's planning to go to college and later to teach, and he's afraid he has lost her, but what had he been doing?

I think she is still interested in you, Larry, and that you may safely ask her for dates if you want to. She is young and likes to have fun, that is all. Maybe she thinks it is a lark to try to make you jealous. You can at least have an occasional good time with her until she goes to college, and maybe keep in touch.

"MY DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Will you please tell me what to do? I have a very dear little friend that I feel I must and cannot see the harm that might come if it were known. I am the only one she has confided in and I have talked and pleaded, but she says she just cannot quit seeing him. I'm sure she does nothing wrong, but you can't expect people on the outside to believe what can make her realize the sorrow. So please suggest some way I row it might cause some of them."

VIRGIN ANNA.

Maybe if she could meet the young man's wife she would feel differently about him, and might be prevailed upon to "sacrifice" herself. It is more to blame if he encourages her in her infatuation. Usually the more opposition young people get to their affairs the more they persist. It makes them seem more important, I take it. And at 16 such affairs are soon over. If your friend goes too far, you can threaten to have nothing more to do with her. That might make her think.

RAMONA L.: I think I would stop worrying about the boy, dear, as you are both so young. Be friendly to him, as he says he will be to you, but that is all. I think you will feel better so.

YOUR IRISH PAL: Just let the boy friend have plenty of rope, dear. Why not accept dates with other boys? Practice your dancing so that you feel sure of yourself, and have a good time as you can, and maybe he will get tired of his "freedom" and come back.

Peter's Adventures

Duck drew a deep sigh and continued his story.

"Now comes the terrible part of my story. I had circled round and round until I was fairly dizzy when at last I sighted the pool. No flock to be seen! Surely I was not too late. I settled down to wait, and just then I caught sight of a head bobbing up and down on the water. To be sure the head was gray and not black, but it belonged to a Duck, of that I was perfectly sure. Perhaps the fellow could give me news of my friends!"

"I wonder who it could have been," said Peter, trying to think whether he had met any gray duck on his rambles, and declaring that he hadn't, just as his friend took up the thread of his tale.

"That is just what I said to myself, 'now who could that duck be?' And, as you may have guessed, I didn't intend to lose many moments in finding out."

"After so long a time of circling about alone any duck looking good to me—even a gray-headed one—so I started to swim toward him as fast as I could go, and hadn't taken but a few strokes when right behind him I saw another bobbing head and then another and another. They had most reached the first reed, and could, indeed, have touched his bill with my peak had I stretched out my neck, when, horrors! I heard the sound most terrible of all to a Duck's ears, a 'bang' from the stick—that-kills!"

"Quick as a wink down I dove and took quite a few strokes under the water before I came to the surface to find myself surrounded by those Ducks. What strange fellows they were! There they floated, just as quietly as if nothing had happened, bobbing calmly up and down, up and down. 'Bang' went the stick—that-kills, again and still again, and each time I dove, half-screamed to death, but those ducks didn't care enough about the noise to even get their heads wet. Nor did they quick to warn me."

"Something was certainly wrong. Then at last I understood. Those miserable Ducks had deliberately deceived me. They wanted me to be shot. They were trying their best to lead me into danger, and if I had not been so quick to dive into the water they would have lured me to my fate."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A NEW HEART NECESSARY—Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die?—Ezekiel 18:31.

SURRENDERIN RIGHTS

A referendum is to be held shortly in Wisconsin to decide whether or not the state prohibition enforcement law shall be retained on the books. The New York state enforcement act was repealed some years ago. Some of the states have never had enforcement acts. This exhibition of state rights is an understandable manifestation; but it has its dangers. The eighteenth amendment gives congress and the several states concurrent power to enforce it. The presumption seems to be that where a state refuses to assume its share of the responsibility for enforcement, congress and the executive branch of the federal government will assume and discharge of entire responsibility therefor.

Something of this sort seems to have been hinted by Mr. Hoover, when he said in his inaugural address that among the reasons for the lax enforcement of prohibition was the "failure of some states to accept their share of responsibility for concurrent enforcement." Whether the federal government wishes to assume full responsibility for enforcement in those states that refuse to accept their share of the burden is of no practical importance. Unquestionably it will be important to do so. The question therefore arises, whether it is wiser for a state to do its own enforcement in its own way and thus preserve a semblance of state rights; or to invite the consequences implied in Mr. Hoover's warning. A state that lies down on the job and thus invites federal invasion of its police powers is hardly in a position to object if that invasion is carried out with the efficiency and ruthlessness characteristic of authority remote from local prejudices.

The potential consequences of leaving enforcement entirely to the federal government transcend theoretical rights. They can come home to a state with unpleasant directness. State enforcement officers are amenable to state law and courts. They can't go too far in their enthusiasm without hearing from those who hire and fire them. A federal enforcement officer knows no law but that laid down for him at Washington. When he shoots an innocent citizen or commits any other indictable crime, a federal court steps in and assumes jurisdiction in the case. The state in which the crime is committed has nothing to say about it. This is something for states to ponder, which think they will be better off if they leave enforcement entirely to Uncle Sam.

NEW YORK.—When Porter Carruthers was the business brains of the N. Y. Evening Post he decided to arouse his advertising bureau with a pep talk. So he urged Christopher Morley, then the rag's columnist, to make the speech before the men. Morley was strenuously opposed to this Rotarian stunt, but finally consented.

The entire advertising staff collected in Mr. Carruthers' office. They waited an hour for Morley, who groaned as he entered. Then, in a greatly annoyed manner, he briefly chirped: "As I look over this gathering it strikes me that if each of you fellows would bring in at least one note, read 'We just heard about your illness. You wouldn't know us because we are obscure people. But we used to enjoy you so much and trust you will permit us to make you happy for a few moments. Please take, this money and have them buy flowers to make your sickroom more cheerful on Easter, or something.'"

There was no signature. It was apparent that the thoughtful sender sacrificed themselves. It was the first letter any one sent the one-time stage favorite during his long and miserable confinement.

The Way of the World

THE KING BUSINESS
Figure Abdul Kadri was the favorite son of the late sultan of Turkey. If the kingdom had survived, the prince might now be looting the throne. Instead, he has been looking for a job in the orchestra in a restaurant in Budapest, Hungary. Well, the king business in Europe isn't so good as it once was. Most of the kings on the checker board of the world have been taken out of play. Those who are left listen to the people. They are voters at the polls.

WHAT IS IT WORTH?
There is such a thing as putting a money value on anything and being sure that it is accurate. You may want a thing so much that your price is absurdly high, judged by somebody else's desire, or perhaps you wouldn't pay ten dollars for what somebody else would gladly pay a thousand.
Did you know that the cost of discovering the new world by Christopher Columbus was only $6,000? Columbus got a salary of $20 a year. Sailors got two dollars a month. The ships were fitted up for $2,300. Food cost a dollar a head a month. Put it all alongside the $6,000 that Columbus spent. Who shall say what anything is worth. You never can tell.

LET'S BE CAREFUL
Says a wise lawyer, George Wickham: "We used to think that was a terrible sport of kings. It's in great danger of becoming the toy of democracies." Talkers and writers have long been claiming war upon diplomats and rulers who sit around a table and move men like checkers. But let's watch them. The passions of a democracy may run as wild or wilder than those of a monarchy. Rulers and diplomats may move more slowly than the people themselves. The flame of a certain kind of misguided patriotism may run across a nation like a prairie fire.

PROHIBITION INVESTIGATION
All well wishers of the republic will hope that President Hoover's prohibition commission will do more than look into the manner of law enforcement. The people are ready for an examination of the whole matter of prohibition. There are no phases of the subject which a committee on inquiry can properly leave out.

FLOOD CONDITIONS ON MISSISSIPPI CLOSELY WATCHED
By MAJ. GEN. EDGAR JADWIN
Chief of Army Engineers
(Edgar Jadwin was born at Honesdale, Pa., Aug. 7, 1855. He studied at Lafayette college and was later graduated from the United States Military Academy and the School of Application, in engineering. He was promoted through the ranks to the office of chief of engineers, with the title of major general, in 1926. He was stationed at the Panama Canal during four years of its construction and served in France during the World War where he supervised engineering work over 60,000 men. He has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.)

Present conditions on the Mississippi and its tributaries are considered serious and the danger of a flood comparable to that of 1927 has passed unobserved heavy rains occur.

Army engineers, however, are watching the Mississippi proper very closely, particularly at the lower end of the river as the crest of the flood approaches the Arkansas river. Thus far no damage has been suffered by the levees under construction by the government at points along the Mississippi, the building of which were made necessary after the 1927 flood.

As to the Mississippi flood-protection plan the Cairo flood-project is one of the most necessary of the entire program. By the construction of these levees the Mississippi would be enabled to overflow into an emergency channel several miles wide. Its present channel is but two miles in width. Under the plan the levee and the area between it and the new high bank levees would provide the floodway.

Army engineers are cooperating in every way possible to safeguard the levees along the river and its tributaries. General Jadwin's headquarters in Washington, to army engineers in the field to repair the damaged levees, regardless of whether or not they are government-constructed. Two-thirds of the cost of repair work of this nature is borne by the government, under the flood legislation passed by congress. In addition to the commissioned engineering officers, enlisted men of the army corps are stationed at strategic points along the river to assist in the protective work.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What characterizes our modality of today. We have discarded the narrow bodies, tight stays and clumsy garments which once distorted unexercised bodies. As we have discarded the unhealthy, heavy wigs which were formerly a fashion.

Heavy grease paint as a cosmetic is today for theatrical use only, and the chalky, coarse-grained, white-lead powders used in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries have given way to fine, fluffy powders of pure composition which are most pure and protect milady's skin.

Each beauty secret, each cream and lotion which a fashionable feminine of other days was wont to use, has been tested and tried by modern science, in the cold light of a laboratory. What is harmful has been discarded. What is good kept and improved upon.

The knowledge of medicine, chemistry and physiology, in its present high modern development combines with the records of history to build wise, helpful beauty products for the women of today. Beauty is awake! It lives and breathes with brave vitality, in a healthy, normal atmosphere of sunlight and freedom. Gone is the silly stuffiness of a puritanical era. Gone are the studied languors of artificiality and affectation.

The woman of today is superbly beauty-conscious. Like the pagan of old, she puts a proper valuation upon physical perfection. And unlike the early Grecian, she is able to follow her own inspired dictates and assert her superiority.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—President Hoover spends eight hours in bed out of each 24. At least, just now. Congress may keep him up later, when it meets. So may parties, when the social season is on.

Even now, however, he gets fewer than eight hours sleep. He invariably takes a book to bed with him. Not always a detective story, either. The president is a biography fan, too.

Eleven is his bedtime, and he rises at seven, but how long he lies awake reading I can't find out. I doubt whether anyone knows. Probably he does off gradually and couldn't tell the precise minute, himself. Certain chroniclers claim to have timed him all day, but I am aware of none who has sat up with him, to clock his first snooze.

I admit I hate prying into such intimate details of a notability's life as—what time does he go to bed and get up?—eat his meals?—brush his teeth?—all that minutiae.

There have been presidents whom it irritated, too. What wonder? The veriest waste slave would rebel called on by his boss for a split-second account of his every waking moment, on duty or off.

Nevertheless, the public demands it of presidents. Blessings!—say I, speaking as a newspaper man—on Mr. Hoover. He accepts these sassy questions, not only good-naturedly, but understandingly—and answers them.

Improved on Mr. Hoover's. Naturally, Mr. Hoover will get his reward. He is certain of all the "breaks" in the news. Correspondents are human. They do their darnedest to be nice to folk who are nice to them.

Aside from his easy accessibility through an ideal private secretary, the president is a first-class news source on his own account.

I believe his press visitors will agree that Mr. Hoover, as president, gives an impression of far greater liberality in his political views than some of them had expected.

He appears opposed to an oppressive tariff—almost a disciple of the tariff-for-revenue creed. Many forecasters predicted that he would betray jealousy of congress. Instead, he speaks more respectfully of its prerogatives than any of his recent predecessors.

Not a trace of the dictatorial strictest constitutionalist must admit him entitled to. His law-enforcement attitude is criticized by those who blame the laws, themselves. If they break down. Yet even these critics wonder if his aim may not be to force a climax, to hasten real reform.

But the presidential schedule? Well, up at 7, breakfast at 8, at his desk at 9, luncheon at 1, back at work at 2:30, finished at 6 to 6:15. Then maybe a short walk or a auto ride. Dinner at 7:30. A couple of hours of such privacy as is permitted to presidents. To bed, as aforesaid, at 11—with a book, inevitably. To sleep, Morpheus alone knows when.

Of course, on cabinet days, which are Tuesdays and Fridays, at least two of the executive's forenoon hours are spent in conference with his department heads.

Twice a week, too, he receives the president between noon and 1, and shakes hands with all comers, but one of these reception days is to be canceled soon, it is understood.

Diet and Health

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables.
"Dear Doctor Lulu: I chuckled when I finished reading your foundation diet for reducing the other day. It sounds so simple, but where, except for the few women who live in their own homes, can one get one-half pound of spinach, or raw carrots? I have visions of asking for them at any of the local women places for the bottled popular. Just how would you go about it? It is an impossible thing for them in New York to live at home. Couldn't somebody make money on this? What about the vegetable plat? I hate it. Yours for emancipation."
MISS S.

Even the fat ladies of New York can have apples, oranges, bananas, pears or other fruits in their rooms. Miss S. A good-sized apple weighs almost one-half pound. Then certainly you can always get fruit and vegetable salads in the restaurants and tea rooms. And there is no reason why you cannot keep a small cabbage in your room and have some lemon juice with it. You can take this before going out to dine. If you are afraid you might overeat, this would take the edge off your appetite.

Restaurants, as a rule, cook their vegetables so there is not much taste to them—they use too much water. I cook them too long, so I don't blame you for not liking the vegetable plate. Usually the meat orders in a restaurant are large enough for two, and frequently when I am dining with a friend, I suggest that one of us order a meat dish and the other several vegetables, and then we divide. In this way we do have a larger amount of the vegetables and enough meat or fish for each.

I hope you will get something from these suggestions, Miss S.

The foundation diet for the reducer's (and underweighters' and normal person's) diet is contained in our pamphlet on reducing and gaining weight. See column rules for obtaining this.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED

Charles C. "Cross-Country" Pyle has already proved that he is in some ways a great promoter. He now can begin proving that he is a magician. Only a guy who can reach into a tall hat with his bare arm and come out with a ton of coal neatly tied in baby ribbon, figures to show any great profit on a trans-continental foot race.

Yet, for the second time he is going to try to pick up the big money with an oyster fork. Before he had nearly always used a steam shovel.

Last year "Cash and Carry" demonstrated how to lose $100,000 on his first "bunions derby." He freely admits this much. But with his characteristic optimism, Pyle is now figuring to show how it is possible to make a profit of $100,000 on a second race of this nature.

As a result more than 100 runners, young and old, foreign and domestic started Monday in New Jersey after Pyle's prizes.

It remains a question as to whether this "second annual" cross country foot race will be a success but insofar as Charles himself is concerned, it will undoubtedly be a success. There is this to be said that no matter what the outcome may be, Mr. Pyle backs his ventures to the limit once he starts them. Undaunted by the fact that the "caravan of corns" was a financial flivver, Charles is convinced the current event will pay big dividends.

To begin with, Mr. Pyle asked $300 as an entry fee from each starter, which was a good thought for him. Then he persuaded chambers of commerce right across the country to guarantee to underwrite the undertaking and pay the costs of the trip.

If that is on the up and up, Charles may more than make expenses. Then there is this new feature this year. A vaudeville show is accompanying Pyle's efforts and this added attraction is expected to compensate in some small measure for the fact that runners do not gain an hour or so every thousand miles. The contestants, whether running or walking, face the prospect of losing an hour or so now and then, but what's the difference when they are engaged in an affair that is advertised to take a few months or more to complete.

Perhaps "Cold Cash" can put this coast-to-coast renewal over in a big way. If he does he will surprise everyone else and possibly, deep down in his own heart, himself. But if the improbable should occur we will not take off our hat to him. The hat, in fact, won't be available. We'll be eating it.

ASSESSMENTS FOR PAVING APPROVED

Overruling the written protests of twenty-six property owners, County Commissioners have approved assessments made against fifty land owners in Xenia and Springfield Twp. for 5 per cent of the cost of paving that portion of the Columbus-Cincinnati Pike between Xenia and Springfield. The assessments in Xenia Twp. total $2,132.25 and in Springfield Twp. $2,424.69.

The written objections were filed at a final hearing Saturday. All but twenty-four of the property owners assessed objected on the grounds the assessments are contrary to law, were made without authority of law, exceed special benefits and because their properties, they claim, are not especially benefited by the improvement of the road.

NINE SCHEDULED IN NEW C. A. W. W. LOOP BY YELLOW JACKETS

Borstmens To Open With Wittenberg On April 13.

By PHIL FRAME
Cedarville College's baseball team will play fifteen games this spring, including six at home and nine away, according to an announcement Tuesday.

Nine of the games are with opponents in the newly-organized C. A. W. W. League, comprising Cedarville, Antioch, Wilmington and Wilberforce. The "Yellow-Jackets" will meet each of the other three league teams three times this season.

Definite dates have been arranged for thirteen of the games but the dates upon which Wilberforce University and Wittenberg College will appear at Cedarville for games have not been decided upon.

Cedarville opens its season against Wittenberg at Springfield April 11 and the first league game is with Antioch College at Cedarville, April 13. Antioch's second appearance at Cedarville June 7 will wind up the schedule.

With seven veterans back, Cedarville has bright prospects for a strong team. The only problem faced by Coach Marvin Borst is that of developing a third baseman and another good pitcher or two.

Albert Turner, possibly the best all-around athlete in the school, is so versatile where baseball is concerned that he may be used either as a pitcher, catcher or first baseman. He is a left-hander and will probably be called upon to pitch most of the games.

Don Allen, who is a right-hander, also pitches well and when not playing second base will probably alternate with Turner in the box.

Ray Smith is counted upon to cover first and Paul Tanner, another veteran, is considered the best bet for shortstop. Third basemen are scarce but Wade Turner and Alfred Townsley are two of the most promising candidates for infield posts and it is likely one of these two will be stationed at third, thus rounding out the infield.

The three outfield positions will be taken care of by veterans. Walter Boyer, Paul Armstrong and Silva Lyon have each had previous experience.

Behind the plate will be Wendell Boyer and DeWitt Rutan, the latter a veteran.

Following are the dates for thirteen of the fifteen games to be played:

April 11—Wittenberg away.
April 13—Antioch at home (L).
April 16—Wilberforce away (L).
April 20—Muskingum away.
April 27—Wilberforce away (L).
May 1—Dayton at home.
May 7—Wilmington away (L).
May 14—Antioch away (L).
May 18—Dayton away.
May 21—Wilmington away (L).
May 25—Defiance away (L).
May 29—Wilmington home (L).
June 7—Antioch at home (L). (L) designates league games.

FOUND GUILTY AND SENTENCED AT ONCE

After deliberating five minutes a jury in Common Pleas Court convicted Sanford Miller, colored, Tuesday morning, of theft of an auto valued at $350 from Lee Spahr, this city, last January 7.

Immediately after the verdict was returned, Sanford waived the right to file a motion for a new trial and was sentenced by Judge R. L. Gowdy to serve from two to seven years in Ohio State Penitentiary.

The trial began Tuesday morning and was brief. Miller, denying the state's charge, testified that he had walked to Dayton on the day he was alleged to have stolen Spahr's car.

Archie Gordon acted as foreman of the jury.

DIES ON SATURDAY

He succeeds O. H. Cornwell, who resigned two months ago to become military instructor at the O. S. and S. O. Home.

BUS OPERATOR SUED FOR $25,000; SUIT BASED ON ACCIDENT

Carl E. Fent, Jamestown, who operates a bus line between Cedarville and Springfield, is named defendant in a personal injury suit for $25,000 damages, filed in Common Pleas Court by Kate Setz, Cedarville nurse.

The damage action is based on an alleged accident which occurred April 2, 1927 while the plaintiff was a passenger in one of the busses operated by Fent.

The plaintiff sets forth she boarded the bus at Glenwood and Fountain Aves. in Springfield and that she occupied the one vacant seat next to the door, which had supposedly been closed by the driver after she had entered.

She charges that without warning to the passengers, the bus stopped so suddenly that she lurched from her seat, was thrown against the door and out onto the pavement, the fall rendering her unconscious.

The plaintiff asserts she sustained a brain concussion, wrenched shoulder and side, was sick four months, and spent $100 for medical attention. She asserts that she believes her injuries to be permanent and that she will be unable to follow her profession as a nurse.

J. B. Malone, A. J. Halloran and L. T. Ness, Springfield attorneys, represent the plaintiff.

WEST JEFFERSON CLUB IS RAIDED

WEST JEFFERSON, O., April 2.—Fifteen men seized in a raid on the Tanbark Club, an alleged gambling resort near here, were to appear before local magistrates today.

STUYVESANT FISH SAYS COAST GUARD BOARDED HIS YACHT

NEW YORK, April 2.—Stuyvesant Fish, member of a prominent New York family, told today how his yacht was boarded Saturday night by men he believes to have been coast guards, how the yacht was ransacked for liquor and how he, his wife and two sons were covered by pistols during the search. No liquor was found.

Fish was returning from Wilmington, Del., where he had gone to get his new yacht "Restless."

At sunset Saturday, Fish said, they came sailing out of Kill Von Kull near the Statue of Liberty.

"We saw a boat coming toward us," Fish said. "My front light, side lights, rear light and cabin lights were all lit. The cabin window at the back was large and they could easily see what we were doing inside."

Fish said he ran his yacht within 100 yards of the boat to show the other crew he was making no attempt to escape.

"My propeller was twisted and I knew from my previous run that I could not make more than twelve miles an hour. The guardsmen told me later we had been speeding and that they had to chase us for an hour. Perfectly absurd! Soon my captain turned the yacht directly across his course and stopped. On asking him why he'd done so, he informed me that the coast guard was shooting, whether at us or in the air, I am unable to say as we were not hit."

Fish said a boat pulled alongside and his wife and two sons were confronted by six men with pistols. Then one man climbed aboard, while Fish protested that he was a peaceful citizen and was bringing his yacht home. The man searched the yacht thoroughly, Fish said. The boarder wore a badge on which was the number 979.

"One of the men said, 'You were very lucky not to have our machine gun turned on you,'" Fish said. Fish indicated he would not let the matter drop.

Coast guard officials said no report of a raid on the "Restless" or any other yacht had been turned in. They pointed out that their men did not wear numbered badges.

Fish is a cousin of Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York.

TRAGEDY MARKS SON OF DRY RAID VICTIM

name was Roy Smith. They call him a deputy sheriff. I am glad I shot him. He killed my mother who never hurt anybody. My mother was good. She did not sell liquor like they say. She taught me to love God and obey the flag. Now when I hear the 'star Spangled Banner' I no longer feel a thrill run up and down my back. The 'star Spangled Banner' stands for law, which my mother told me to respect. But the law killed my mother."

Town Mourns With Boy

So old has Gerald grown in one short week that he cannot cry. He went to his mother's funeral and the whole town of Aurora turned out to mourn with him. The funeral procession was tremendously long. People in the town were muttering, too.

Gerald knows that his mother was killed for five dollars. That is the price that Boyd Fairweather, a private dry snooper, received as an auto salesman, received for swearing out an affidavit that Gerald's dead mother, Mrs. Lillian DeKing, had sold him a glass of moonshine.

When the dry gunmen came with their fierce armament of many guns and tear gas bombs to search the house, Gerald's father, Joseph DeKing, wouldn't let them in. He said that the search warrant wasn't properly made out. Then the dry gunmen went back and got more men and more guns. They battered in the door. But Gerald says they didn't have to do that. He says they battered it in after they had killed his mother. Also he says they threw a gas bomb into the room after she was shot and dying there on the floor with blood all over her.

"I screamed and screamed," Gerald says. "But they only cursed me and cursed my father. They wouldn't even help lift mamma. We had to drag her across the room and down the stairs. Somebody told me that she wouldn't have died, either, if the policemen hadn't thrown the gas bomb into the room after they had shot her. on, it is awful."

Gerald is the central figure quite naturally in the latest tragedy to follow rigorous enforcement of the dry law.

The great state of Illinois has taken official cognizance of the case. Already the state's attorney general, Oscar Carlstrom, has appointed Charles W. Hadley, the assistant attorney general, to represent him and the commonwealth at a thorough investigation into the shooting which killed everyone in Aurora was ruthless.

The snooper, Boyd Fairweather, who was hired at five dollars a case by the office of State's Attorney George D. Carberry, of Kane County, and the man whose affidavit for such a small betrayal sum, sent dry raiders out to kill Mrs. DeKing, has been in hiding under official protection since the fusillade of death nearly every eye has been given to Gerald's case.

Gerald saw the cold clumps of earth fall on his mother's casket and he helped support his bandaged father, whose head was swathed and whose arm hung limp at his side, testifying to the terrific beating he received at the hands of the dry raiders who took a life for a pint, pummeled him then killed his wife.

Gerald saw and heard the cold clumps fall on the casket, but most of all he saw them, because he cannot speak, he cannot think like grownups. He cannot reconcile the reasons pro and con and the various moral intricacies which made prohibition a law.

He reasons only in losses like the time he lost six of his beautiful blue marbles and cried all night. The marbles were gone. Now his mother is gone.

Shadows of a million years move fittingly in his eyes like the shadows you sometimes see at dusk on a lake when the wind is sighing and the trees sway on the mirrored surface of the water.

Beyond Point of Tears

And he cannot cry. He can only putter with his childish mind like an old man puttering feebly across a room.

What matters it to him that a big hullabaloo is now being raised throughout the state and people everywhere are writing him letters and sending telegrams of consolation.

What does it matter to him that after his mother was dead and the dry raiders searched the house they found only half a gallon of home-made wine, made from grapes that grow each year as they have always grown from the little arbor in back of the DeKing home.

These are matters for philosophers and for casuists but not for boys. Boys reason only in terms of lost marbles and—lost mothers. When a marble is lost it is usually gone forever. So, too, with mothers.

Gerald cannot speak and he cannot think. His mind is no match for his eyes grown old so suddenly—eyes that saw the cake bake and saw his mother frost it for supper just a week ago.

These are sad eyes, indeed, from which peer the sorrow of a million years.

CHAPTER LIII

The next morning Betty went to Mr. Saunders before Andy came. She explained the circumstances of her acting as cashier at the restaurant at the dinner hour.

"Mr. Saunders, I had no thought of hiding this," she said. "I simply had not thought until you came in last night of the possibility of the office objecting to my holding two positions. If you do object to the arrangement, I will stop it. Tell me frankly how you feel about it. I don't want to do anything that will interfere with my work here."

"I hardly know what to say to you, Miss Brown," he replied, thoughtfully. "If you had told me when you first came, I believe I would have objected. Divided allegiance, serving two masters, and all that sort of thing. But against this theory is the fact that you do your work here as well as I could ask you to. You seem to be pleased with Mr. Adair. I don't like to tell you to stop."

"But you would like it better if I did?" asked Betty.

"I can't go even that far. I realize what it means to a working girl to pay her board by a couple of hours' work in the evening. Suppose I put it up to Mr. Adair, and see what he says."

"I would rather drop it," said Betty. She had never been introduced to Andy's father, but knew him as a white-haired old gentleman, generally in golf knicker. He rarely came into the office. When he did he paid little attention to the details of the business.

"Oh, he isn't a bear!" laughed Saunders. "He just 'woof'! 'woof' like one."

"If you think best, then," Betty went back to her work.

In a few minutes Saunders came to her office. "Mr. Adair wants to talk to you. Don't be scared of him. He's all right. He says that Andy won't be here today anyhow, and he wants to dictate some letters."

He walked out leaving Betty dismayed. She took her notebook and pencil, and went timidly into Mr. Adair's office.

"Who are you?" demanded the old man at the desk. "How long have you been here? What do you do? What's this I hear about your working in a restaurant?" He scowled, and his bushy white eyebrows met over the top of his nose in a very comical way.

"Betty Brown. Eight months. Secretary. I do." She smiled at him as he answered his questions.

"Huh? Huh? What are you talking about?"

"I answered your four questions."

"You talk like a telegram! Most women are wordy. Talk long hand, not short hand." He rubbed his hair until it stood straight up in front. Betty was beginning to enjoy herself.

"I am Betty Brown, spinster. I have been here eight months as Mr. Andrew Adair's private secretary. I act as cashier at the dinner hour in a restaurant in return for my meals. I spoke of it to Mr. Saunders for fear you might object to my doing so."

"I do! I do! Looks like we didn't pay you living wages. How much would your meals cost you if you didn't work there?"

"I only get my breakfast and dinner. About a dollar and a half a day; but I'll stop it, now I know you don't like it. I don't want to do anything to reflect discredit on the firm."

"You'll do nothing of the kind!" blustered the old man. "You will stop it because you will get a ten dollar a week raise."

"But I have just had a raise!"

"What for? Who gave it to you? How much?"

"Maybe for being a good girl and keeping my pinafare clean!" answered Betty, smiling. "Your son gave it to me. I won't accept any other raise, Mr. Adair. I make enough to buy my meals. I won't work in a restaurant after this evening. I must go back and explain though, of course."

"Never heard of anyone refusing a raise!" blustered the old man. "I will see Saunders about it."

"Did you have some dictation?" asked Betty, holding her notebook out.

"Yes, sir." He began to dictate, and his dictation was difficult, for he injected remarks about the men to whom he wrote, growls about this and that, and made numerous changes. When he had finished he demanded: "Got all that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Don't believe it! You didn't interrupt me once. Makes me mad to be interrupted."

"I'll bring you the letters in half an hour," Betty rose.

"I'm leaving here in an hour to play golf with three fools! I bet they won't be done when I am ready to go," he growled.

Betty went to her desk and typed the letters as rapidly as she could and returned to his room with them.

"What's the matter now? Can't read your notes, of course. I knew it! You write too fast and didn't interrupt!"

"They are all ready," said Betty. "Ready? What you laughing at?" he demanded, scowling.

"At you, Mr. Adair. Your hair looks so comical sticking up in front like that."

"Let it alone! Let it alone!"

Trudy, Deaf, Didn't Hear Judge Say "Suspended"

Speeding Case Reveals Swimming Has Hurt Ears

Gertrude Ederle, so deaf she could not hear the magistrate, smiled happily when a traffic court attendant shouted into her ear that sentence had been suspended after she had pleaded guilty of speeding on Riverside Drive. She won the suspension, Miss Ederle was told, because of the glory she brought her country by swimming the English Channel and because of the explanation she offered for her offense.

Charge Overshadowed

The revelation of Miss Ederle's fight against deafness since 1926, when she conquered the Channel, completely overshadowed the traffic charge, on which a warrant had been issued for her arrest.

About eight months ago, she said, it became apparent her hearing was failing rapidly. She had just completed movie and vaudeville contracts.

Three months later, at her Pelham home, she said, she could hear only the most terrific noises. Since then she has been under treatment and her hearing has improved.

Miss Ederle was ordered into Traffic Court on February 13 and March 13 on the speeding charge, but failed to appear on either date. On March 13 Magistrate Rosenbluth issued a warrant. Yesterday she was told she had not heard of either order until Thursday, when she read of them in the newspapers at High-

SENATE COMMITTEE INCREASES HOME APPROPRIATION $125,000

After preliminary discussion of the general appropriations bill Monday, the Senate finance committee added $125,000 to the appropriation of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home for a new dining room and kitchen, which the Senate and House will be asked to approve.

The finance committee had previously recommended the appropriation of $101,000 for improvements at the Home within the next two years. Of this amount $100,000 is to finance the construction of a new grades building to house all grades at the institution, and $1,000 for erection of a new garage at the new hospital nearing completion.

The total appropriation is now $226,000 for additions and betterments, whereas approximately $500,000 had been sought.

The legislature appropriated $768,901 for operating expenses at the Home for 1929 and 1930, including $278,313 for 1929 and $190,348 for 1930, as well as $150,000 each year for personal service.

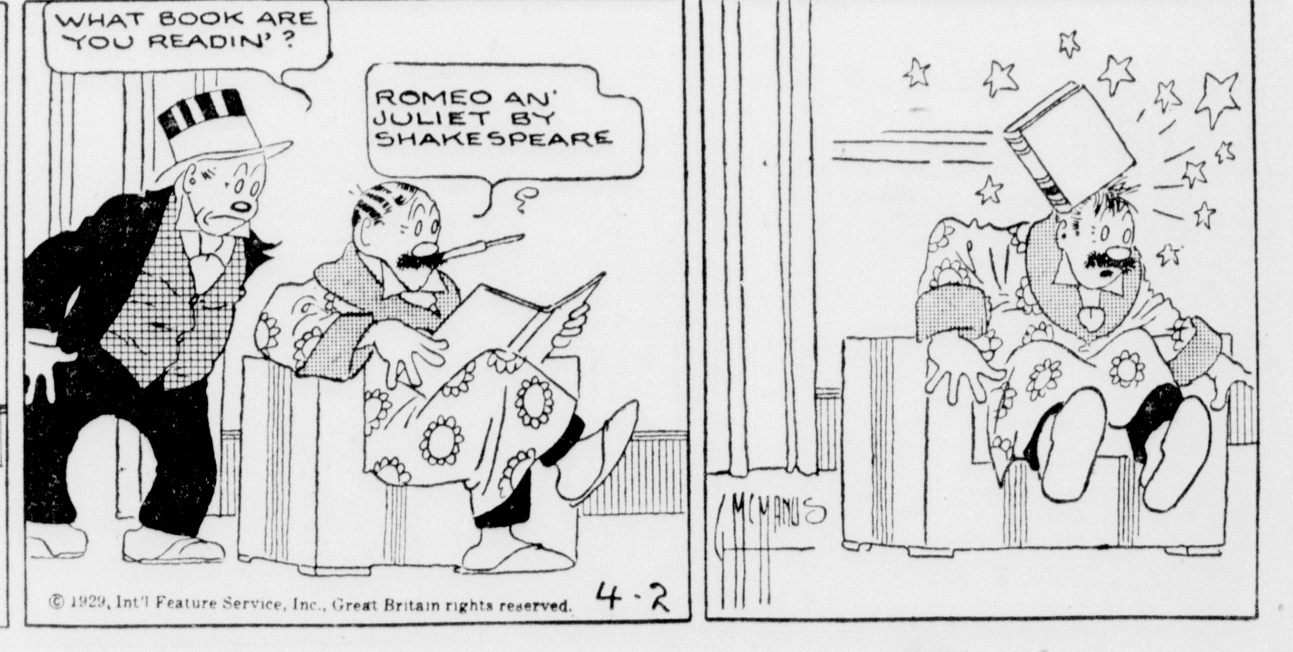

WIDOW AVENUE

CENTERVILLE, Ia., April 2.—Of the twenty-four houses on Eighth St., Centerville, twelve are occupied by widows. The average was even higher a few months ago, before one widow moved and another died.

TRAGEDY MARKS SON OF DRY RAID VICTIM

name was Roy Smith. They call him a deputy sheriff. I am glad I shot him. He killed my mother who never hurt anybody. My mother was good. She did not sell liquor like they say. She taught me to love God and obey the flag. Now when I hear the 'star Spangled Banner' I no longer feel a thrill run up and down my back. The 'star Spangled Banner' stands for law, which my mother told me to respect. But the law killed my mother."

"But I have just had a raise!"

"What for? Who gave it to you? How much?"

"Maybe for being a good girl and keeping my pinhole clean!" answered Betty, smiling. "You gave it to me. I won't accept another raise, Mr. Adair. I make enough to buy my meals. I won't work in the restaurant after this evening. I must go back and explain though, of course."

"Never heard of anyone refusing a raise!" blustered the old man. "I will see Saunders about it."

"You have some dictation?" asked Betty, holding her notebook out.

"Yes, I have!" He began to dictate, and his dictation was difficult, for he injected remarks about the men to whom he wrote, growls about this and that, and made numerous changes. When he had finished he demanded: "Got all that?"

"Don't believe it! You didn't interrupt me once. Makes me mad to be interrupted."

"I'll bring you the letters in half an hour," Betty rose.

"I'm leaving here in an hour to play golf with three fools! I bet they won't be done when I am ready to go," he growled.

Betty went to her desk and typed the letters as rapidly as she could and returned to his room with them.

"What's the matter now? Can't read your notes, of course. I knew! You wrote too fast and didn't interrupt!"

"They are all ready," said Betty. "Ready? What you laughing at?" he demanded, scowling.

"At you, Mr. Adair. Your hair looks so comical sticking up in front like that."

"Let it alone! Let it alone!"

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MADE MEN LIKE HER

CHAPTER LIII

"Yes, sir. What was it?"

"Go away and don't bother me! Tell Saunders to marry you and Andy to raise your pay, or the other way about. You got me all confused, damn it. Go away!"

"Yes, sir. But it is time you went to your golf engagement." She pointed to the clock.

"Go way, I told you. Don't remind me of things. Somebody is always reminding me of things! Anyhow, you aren't afraid of me. Lots of people are. I like you!"

"The reason people are afraid of you is because of your top-knot," said Betty, gravely. "You have brushed it up again. It looks funny! I'm not afraid of you. I like you, Mr. Adair."

"Go away! You're bothering me!"

"Yes, sir. You won't hesitate to call me when you want to be bothered, will you?"

"Of course not! What are you talking about? I'm late already."

Betty went back to her desk and laid her head on her folded arms and laughed till tears came. She sat with her shoulders shaking when Mr. Saunders came into the room.

"Why, Miss Brown!" he exclaimed. "Don't cry! I told you not to mind him!"

Betty raised her tear-streaming face and shrieked with joy. Miss Anderson and Larkin came into the room. Betty looked at the amazed expression on their faces and almost went into hysterics.

"Don't look at me like that! I've been taking dictation from Mr. Adair. Isn't he a scream?" She pulled the hair on her forehead into a vertical top-knot and said, "Whoof, whoof! Go away, you bother me! People are always bothering me!" Her imitation of his manner set the entire group laughing.

"My gosh! You're the only girl around here who understands him," said Larkin.

Trudy, Deaf, Didn't Hear Judge Say "Suspended"

Speeding Case Reveals Swimming Has Hurt Ears

Gertrude Ederle, so deaf she could not hear the magistrate, smiled happily when a traffic court attendant shouted into her ear that sentence had been suspended after she had pleaded guilty of speeding on Riverside Drive. She won the suspension, Miss Ederle was told, because of the glory she brought her country by swimming the English Channel and because of the explanation she offered for her offense.

Charge Overshadowed The revelation of Miss Ederle's fight against deafness since 1926, when she conquered the Channel, completely overshadowed the traffic charge, on which a warrant had been issued for her arrest.

About eight months ago, she said, it became apparent her hearing was failing rapidly. She had just completed movie and vaudeville contracts.

Three months later, at her Pelham home, she said, she could hear only the most terrific noises. Since then she has been under treatment and her hearing has improved.

Miss Ederle was ordered into Traffic Court on February 18 and March 18 on the speeding charge, but failed to appear on either date.

On March 18 Magistrate Rosenbluth issued a warrant. Yesterday she explained she had not heard of either order until Thursday, when she read of them in the newspapers at Highland, N. J., where she had been staying with a friend.

Late for Appointment

In pleading guilty of speeding Miss Ederle said she was late for an appointment with her ear doctor and drove faster when she saw traffic was light.

As she was leaving the court someone asked her if it were really true that she had been totally deaf five months ago. She replied smilingly:

"Yes. I couldn't even hear the sweet words my boy friend was telling me—that was the worst of it. Just think I might have missed a proposal."

SENATE COMMITTEE INCREASES HOME APPROPRIATION $125,000

After preliminary discussion of the general appropriations bill Monday, the Senate finance committee added $125,000 to the appropriation of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home for a new dining room and kitchen, which the Senate and House will be asked to approve.

The finance committee had previously recommended the appropriation of $101,000 for improvements at the Home within the next two years. Of this amount $100,000 is to finance the construction of a new trades building, to house all trades at the institution, and $1,000 for erection of a new garage at the institution, and $1,000 for other work.

The disaster that befell Pilot Al Wilson and his mechanic while filming a thrilling airplane scene in "Hell's Angels" may have the effect of checking, temporarily at least, the movement underway to make Hollywood air-minded.

It will be recalled that Wilson and his mechanic, Phil Jones, were making battle scenes for what was positively the last shot of the picture, when the plane broke a wing and crashed, Jones being killed because he could not escape from the cabin while Wilson floated down in a parachute and escaped with an injured ankle.

Wilson and Jones were doubling for Jimmy Hall and Ben Lyon in the scene. Hall had flown 125 hours in the plane during the picture and Lyon had been up approximately the same amount of time.

Wallace Beery is one of the best flyers among the screen stars. His only accident was a forced landing near Las Vegas, Nev., when he tried to land on a narrow highway the plane went over on its nose. time. Jimmy refused to take the air in the ship on the day of the accident because of a hunch that originated in a dream the night before. The doubles were therefore pressed into service and the fatal accident followed.

Picture actors who once included "no airplane work" in their contracts now are scornful doubles for flying—offering often to pilot the ship themselves. It is said screen performers today are the most consistent passengers on the various commercial lines and many have their own planes and have formed a Studio Flying Club.

William Gibbs McAdoo, Jr., son of the politician, is the founder of this organization which numbers among its members Wallace Beery, Ben Lyon, Eddie Quillan, Reginald Denny, Jeanette Loff, Bebe Daniels, Greta Garbo and Lina Basquette. Four recently participated in a marriage in which William Deltz, cameraman and Barbara Hunter, film editor flew from Pathe studios to Santa Barbara where Eddie Quillan acted as best man and Jeanette Loff as maid of honor. All four returned by plane in time for work the same day.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROADSUMMARY OF ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1928

THE 82ND ANNUAL REPORT of The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, covering operations for the year 1928, will be formally presented to the stockholders at the annual meeting on April 9, 1929. The report shows that although the Company's total operating revenues in 1928 were over $14,000,000 less than in 1927, its net income was over $14,000,000 greater than in 1927. Last year was the fourth successive year in which the net income exceeded that of any previous year.

Net income for the year, amounting to $82,507,613, was equivalent to 14.69% upon the present capital stock outstanding, as compared with 13.65% upon the amount outstanding at the close of 1927.

The factors chiefly responsible for the Company's progress during the year and for its increasing financial success are: Large capital expenditures to improve and expand the railroad's plant and facilities; progressive improvement in operating efficiency and economy; cordial cooperative relations between the management and employees, and the continued patronage of the public whom it has been a pleasure to serve.

CRIMINAL

Of all the culprits who ply the trade of crime, the arsonist is to be most despised. His victims have been legion. To gain dishonest dollars for himself the arsonist will sacrifice the life of others and imperil property of untold value.

But the hand of the law is fairly certain now to seize this criminal. Detection and punishment have been brought to such a high percentage of success that he has small chance of escape. The Arson Squad generally gets its man!

The Stock Fire Insurance companies, through the National Board of Fire Underwriters and its Arson Committee, wage relentless war against the arsonist.

Squads of trained men work quietly and without noise or show, in co-operation with legal authorities, in every state of the Union, to guard the people of America against this crime of arson and the practice of incendiarism by pyromaniacs and other irresponsible persons.

The results have been gratifying, and will be even more so when the American people realize the menace and cost of incendiary fires.

This is but one of many measures employed by the Stock Fire Insurance companies in the elimination of fire hazards—the conservation of life and property. The Arson Squad works constantly with police, fire marshals, fire departments and other officials.
